PRES. LINCOLN'S 150-MILE RACE TO HONOLULU

FIRST TEST PITCH PERFECT

GLORIOUS WEATHER IN PROSPECT

THE FORTUNE OF THE TOSS

London, June 7.
Nottingham has everything in readiness for the First Test.

Glorious weather is forecast, the pitch at Trent Bridge is little short of perfection, and an enormous crowd, fairly certain to break all records for the ground, is metaphorically waiting for the gates to open.

Regrets are expressed on all hands that Larwood is unable to play for the pitch is ideal for his bowling, being today one of the fastest ever produced at Nottingham.

Yesterday's rainfall, not heavy, was opportune as it helped to bind the turf together, making it well-high perfect.

HOTELS OVERTAXED.

Nottingham's hotels are filled to overflowing, being quite incapable of coping with the demand for accommodation. They have been compelled to send visitors away in scores and they have been obtaining bed and breakfast in the village inns and hostels on the roads leading out of Nottingham for several miles distant.

Overseas visitors are numerous, particularly from Australia.

CLEM HILL'S FORECAST.

The Australian cricketers arrived in Nottingham last night. Mr. W. M. Woodfull, the captain of the team, said that the eleven for the Test would not be announced until to-morrow (Friday) morning.

Clem Hill, former Test player for Australia, expressed the opinion that victory would probably depend upon the winning of the toss in view of the great strength in the batting of both teams.—Reuter.

WATER SHORTAGE POSITION

NEED FOR ECONOMY IN USE

London, June 7.
The Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Health, Mr. Geoffrey Shakespeare, stated in the Commons today that the position regarding the water shortage over a large part of the country, in the North-East, Wales, the West and the South-West as well as part of the Midlands, was generally better than a month ago. The South and South-East had not shared in the improvement.

He had no reason to think that water undertakings would not be able to meet the situation, provided consumers continued to play their part in making reasonable economies in the use of water.—British Wireless.

BIG FIGHT FIASCO

Scathing Comment on Baer's Condition

New York, June 7.
"If that's the best the challenger (Max Baer) can do, the fight had better be cancelled entirely," was the comment of the Athletic Commission official who went to Asbury Park today, following a request for the Carno-Baer fight postponement.—Reuter.

HIS MAJESTY AT EPSOM

London, June 7.
The King again visited Epsom Races today, when he saw the Corporation Cup won by Sir R. Brookes' King Salmon.—British Wireless.

UNCERTAINTIES OF FIRST TEST

Final Decision At Last Moment

R. E. S. Wyatt is not likely to lead the England team in the First Test to-day. The decision is, however, being left to the last possible moment. The composition of the side will not be known until an hour or two before the match.

AIR MINISTER CRASHES

NOSE-DIVES AT HESTON

NARROW ESCAPE: UNHURT

London, June 7.
Lord Londonderry, the Secretary of State for Air, piloting a machine at Heston Aerodrome to-day, nose-dived as the result of a bad landing and had a very narrow escape from death or serious injury.

It was not a bad crash but Lord Londonderry was lucky to escape injury.

The Secretary for Air was flying in his own machine when the mishap occurred.

He was practising with a passenger and when descending overshoot the aerodrome. Lord Londonderry opened out the engine to circle round again, but the engine did not pick up sufficiently quickly.

While trying to avoid some tall trees, into which he nearly collided, Lord Londonderry turned the machine into a steep climb and nose-dived in rough ground outside the aerodrome, being slightly damaged with the tail high in the air.

Lord Londonderry, shaken but unhurt, walked calmly to the aerodrome.—British Wireless.

CHANCELLOR OF EXCHEQUER

CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY HONOUR

London, June 7.
At Cambridge to-day the degree of Doctor of Laws was conferred on the Chancellor of the Exchequer Mr. Neville Chamberlain. A similar honour was conferred on his brother, Sir Austen, in 1920, and on his father in 1894.—British Wireless.

FIRE ISOLATED UNDER CONTROL

POSSIBILITY OF SABOTAGE

PASSENGERS SLEEP IN BELTS

(Special to "Telegraph")

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1904. Received, June 8, 9.08 a.m.)

Honolulu, June 7.

After a 150-mile race to Honolulu, with fire isolated in No. 7 hold, but still burning, firemen are now on board the President Lincoln battling the flames.

A naval cutter, the Itasca, went out to meet the Pres. Lincoln lest any emergency might arise, and accompanied her into harbour. It is not believed that her sailing will be long delayed.

There are 168 passengers on board and they all expressed themselves to be extremely glad to be in Honolulu after being up an orchestra that was placed on deck to keep up their morale.

Captain Yardley insists that there was never any real danger, although a fierce blaze had to be fought in the hold at the outset.—United Press.

FIRE OUT.

The destroyer Dunedin also accompanied the Lincoln to Honolulu.

Firemen have now checked the flames and commenced removing the cotton that caused the trouble. Captain George Yardley said that the passengers were summoned on deck and informed that they were not endangered. Most of them had retired by 1 a.m. sleeping in their lifebelts.

VERTIS RECALLED.

Captain Yardley said he recalled the Vertis disaster and decided to take no chances in the event of the spread of the lifebelts and broadcast an S.O.S. Her sailing time is now uncertain.—United Press.

SABOTAGE POSSIBILITY.

Honolulu, June 7.
The possibility that the outbreak of fire on the President Lincoln was due to an attempt at sabotage was expressed by Captain Yardley, though it is thought that spontaneous combustion was the probable cause.

The Lincoln steamed into port with her bows swinging out on the davits and with several of the passengers wearing lifebelts. The cargo in the main hold is still smouldering and immediately on the Lincoln's arrival, a naval tug and fireboats began pouring water into her.

PASSENGERS AT DINNER.

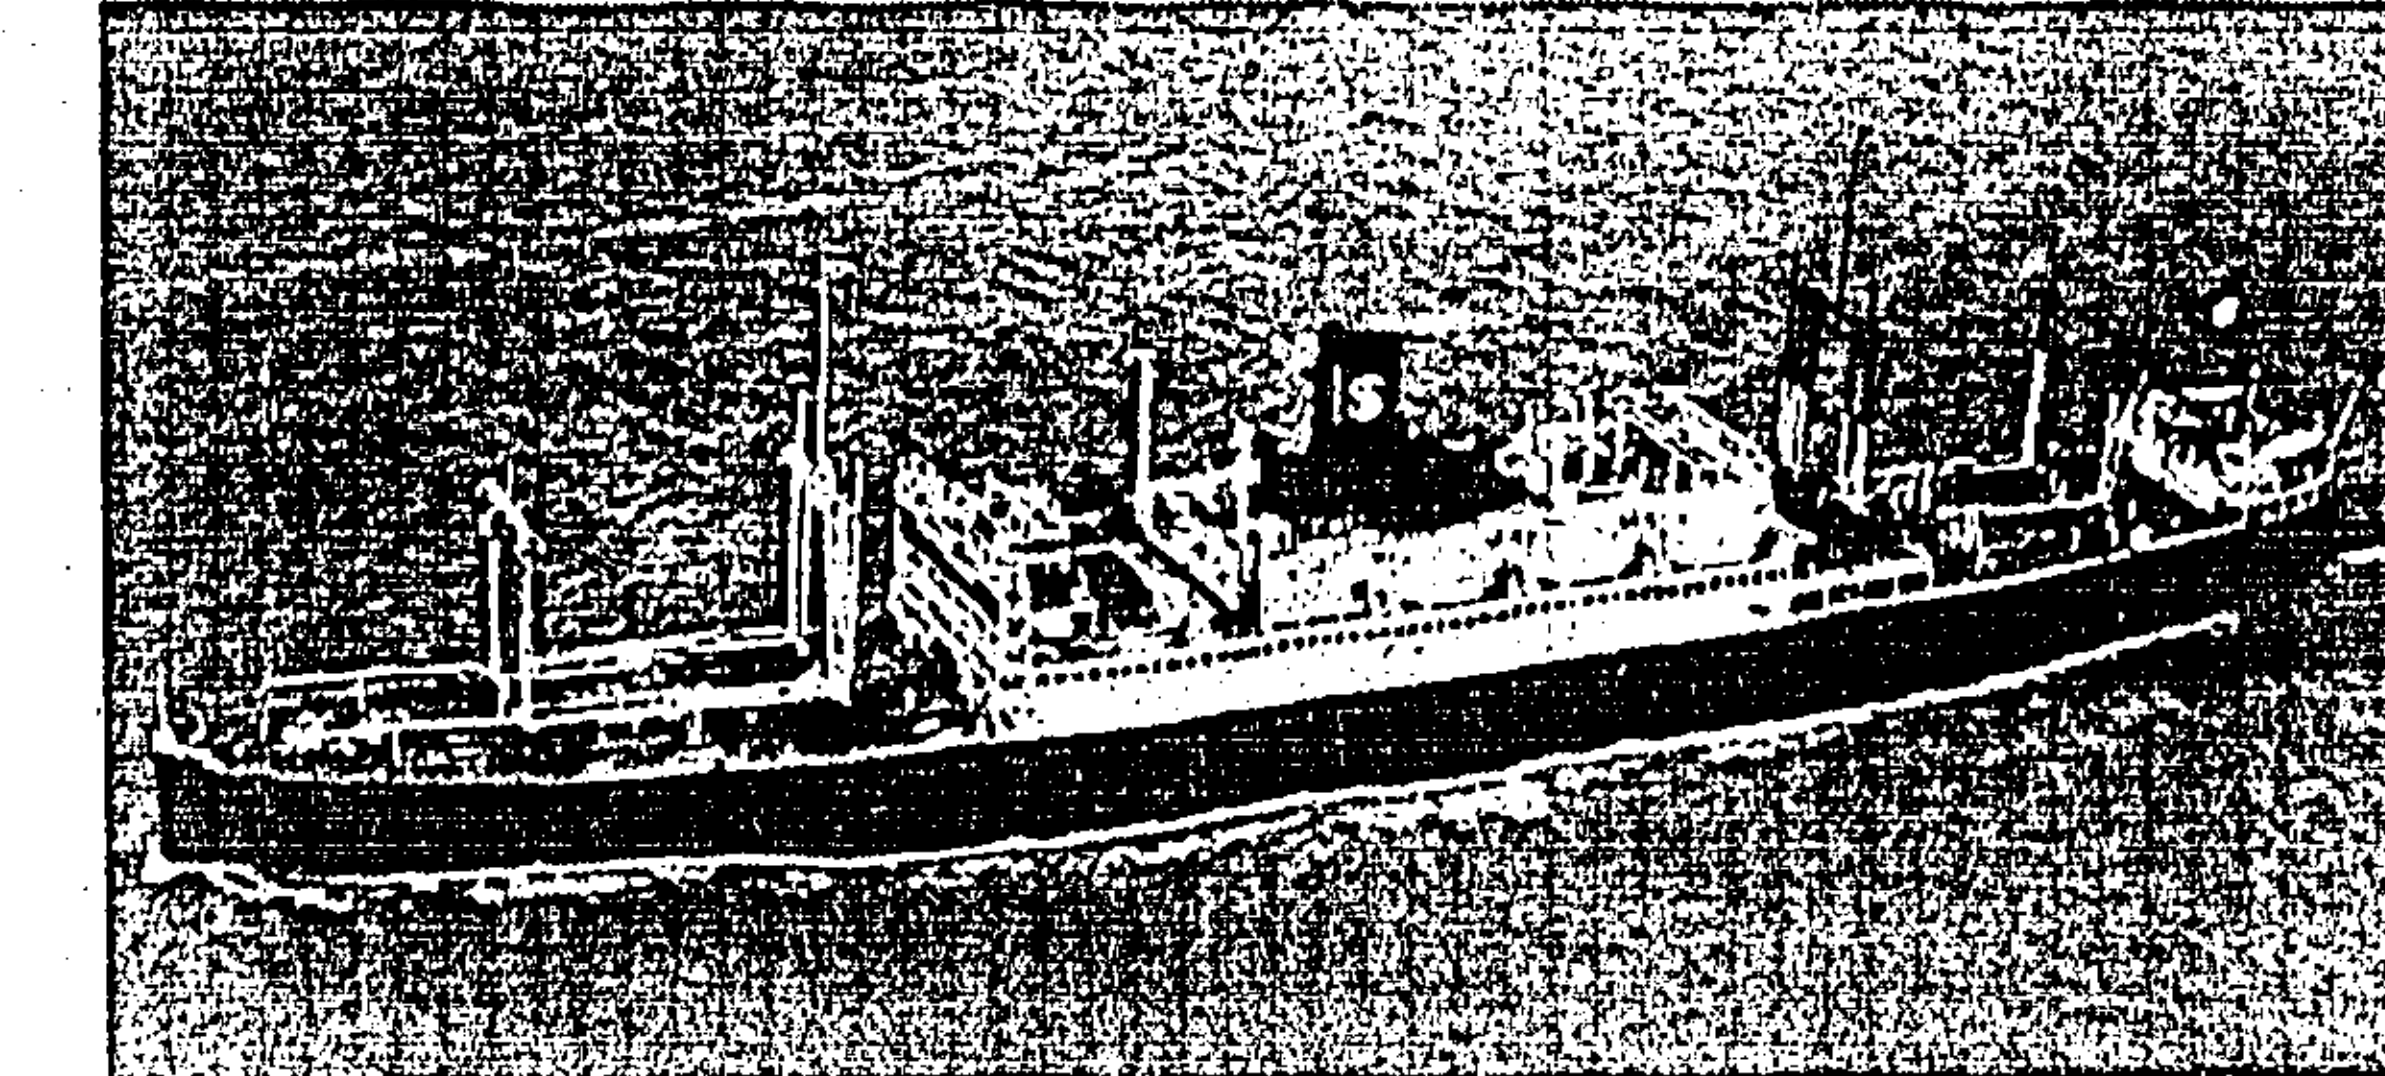

"One of the passengers said: 'Nobody was really alarmed. We got up from dinner quietly when informed that the ship was on fire and put on our life-jackets. We then went on the deck where we remained until about midnight when we were informed that there was no more danger.'"

SCOTSMAN'S STORY.

Mr. James Brown, an Edinburgh resident, interviewed by Reuter's San Francisco correspondent over the wireless telephone, described how in a blinding atmosphere of smoke, the lifeboats were swung out in readiness for abandoning the vessel if the need should arise. All the passengers put on lifebelts on instructions from the officers.

ORCHESTRA HEROES.

Miss Cyrene Hansford, who is also British, declared that the orchestra continued to play throughout the night of crisis and the passengers began dancing while the officers spent their time busily reassuring those who appeared a trifle tremulous.—Reuter.

The President Lincoln has arrived at Honolulu where the fire in her No. 7 hold has been extinguished. The captain has voiced suspicions of sabotage.

N.R.A. CHANGE OF POLICY

PRICE-FIXING TO BE ABANDONED

NEGOTIATION IN FUTURE

Washington, June 7.

Yet another important modification in N.R.A. policy has been ordered, as a result of the experience of its operations in the last twelve months.

The abandonment of the policy of price-fixing, except in the case of the development of clear-cut emergencies, has been announced by General Hugh Johnson, N.R.A. Administrator.

This is the first definite pronouncement on the vexed price question.

The new policy substitutes negotiation for compulsion with the object of including the coded industries to introduce revisions.

PRESENT, PAST AND FUTURE.

To-day's announcement governs all future codes and industries already coded will be approached immediately with a request for voluntary amendments to conform to the new policy.

The National Recovery Administrator states that he aims at avoiding destructive price-cutting, while minimising the opportunities for the artificial maintenance of high prices.—Reuter.

SILVER DOLLAR SPECULATION

MIXED VIEWS ON NEW YORK ACTION

Shanghai, June 8.
Local financial circles believe that the suspension of dealings in Shanghai and Hongkong dollars by New York bankers will contribute towards stability in exchange because of the absence of speculation. Other quarters predict that the situation will have an adverse effect on the Chinese exchange market in the immediate future.—Central News.

NEAR AGREEMENT AT GENEVA

GERMANY'S RETURN IN SIGHT

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1904. Received, June 8, 9.08 a.m.)

Geneva, June 7.

Germany's return to the Disarmament Conference is believed to be practically assured, although those closely connected with the negotiations that have so dramatically improved the outlook decline to make any disclosures concerning the inducement that has effected the change in Germany's attitude.

M. Barthou and Mr. Anthony Eden had a long conversation to-day and it is obvious that a greatly improved atmosphere now prevails.

It is the view of the British delegates that the future of the Conference entirely depends upon the Franco-German conversations that are promised.

FORMULA FOR CONTINUATION OF CONFERENCE

Complete agreement between the British and French delegates regarding Germany's return to Geneva is believed to be in sight after a seven-hour meeting.

Mr. Norman Davis, representing the United States, joined in the Anglo-French conversations.

The three delegations will meet again on Friday morning to discuss the final terms.

HAPPY OUTLOOK.

The agreement will be presented to the meeting of the Bureau of the Conference which is scheduled to meet in the afternoon.

The delegates are in a happy mood as the result of to-day's discussions and say that an agreement can be reached within half an hour if the present spirit of cooperation continues.—United Press.

STATEMENT PROMISED.

London, June 7.
Private conversations in which the British, French and American delegates took part were continued at Geneva to-day.

The latest proposals of the French delegate, M. Barthou, led the British and American delegates to consult their Governments.

It is anticipated that a full statement of the British viewpoint will be made by Mr. Anthony Eden at to-morrow's meeting of the Bureau.

BRITISH VIEW.

Yesterday, in supporting the resolution submitted by the President of the Conference, Mr. Arthur Henderson, to suspend the work of the conference pending negotiations with Germany and France to be conducted on behalf of the conference, Mr. Eden emphasised the British belief that the essential factor in a solution is to obtain some approximation of view on disarmament between those two countries.

Upon this, he said, almost everything depended and, until it is attained, few if any practical results are likely to emerge from a prolongation of the present discussions.—British Wireless.

"MUCH BETTER" OUTLOOK.

Geneva, June 7.
Mr. Anthony Eden, M. Barthou and Mr. Norman Davis had a long discussion this evening, after which they stated that the situation was "much better."

It is understood that the meeting agreed to the text of a resolution which is being submitted for the approval of the Governments concerned.

In the meantime, the Bureau meeting fixed for 10.30 to-morrow (Friday) morning has been postponed until 2.45 p.m., and it will be followed by a meeting of the General Commission at 4 p.m.—Reuter.

STOP PRESS

London, June 8.
Scores were injured in a serious disturbance last night between the Mosley Blackshirts and opponents in the neighbourhood of Olympia, where Sir Oswald Mosley gave an address.

Police intervened and 23 arrests were made.—Reuter.

LACEY'S FINE GOLF

BRITON LEADS IN U.S. OPEN

EQUAL FIRST WITH 71

New York, June 7.

A. J. Lacey, one of the few British challengers, occupied a prominent position at the close of the first round in the American open golf championship to-day.

He was equal first with two Americans, with a score of 71, a brilliant performance on a day when the conditions were as bad as they possibly could be.

The open championship this year is being played over the Ardmore course in Pennsylvania, and the commencement was greeted by a blustering wind that caused the worst general level of play in open tournament in recent years.

Many of the usual prominent performers finished hopelessly behind owing to the vagaries of the wind.

Amateurs occupied a fairly prominent place, but the best of them, the holder of the title, was five strokes behind Lacey at the close of the day.

Lawson Little, fresh from his conquest in the British amateur open championship, was twelve strokes behind the leaders.

BEST SCORES.

Among the best scores were:
A. J. Lacey (Britain) ... 71
R. Cruikshank ... 71
Cox ... 71
Gene Sarazen ... 73
G. Von Elm ... 74
A. N. Hutyan ... 74
M. Dutra ... 74
H. Gulick ... 74
Craig Wood ... 75
Golden ... 75
Billy Burke ... 75
Walter Hagen ... 76
Johnny Goodman ... 76
J. Westland ... 77
J. Moreland ... 77
T. P. Perkins, the former British amateur champion, now in business in the United States, returned a card of 73, and other scores include 82's by Max Marston and Tommy Armour, 83 by Lawson Little and 85 by Fischer.—Reuter.

PRISONER ESCAPES FROM HOSPITAL

Emergency Warning Bell

The police emergency bell sounded a warning shortly before 11 o'clock last night, and a message was circulated amongst the various Stations that a Chinese prisoner, detained at the Kowloon Hospital as a patient, had escaped from custody.

The fugitive was injured recently when he fell while trying to escape from forestry officers who sought his arrest on a charge of wanton tree-cutting. He was admitted to the hospital, where he was confined in the prisoners' ward.

An intensive search for him has so far proved fruitless.

THE WORLD OF WOMEN

Distinctive Fashion

You will want a hint of small design to make this exquisite Spring frock and finish it with a light contrasting collar. Slenderizing are its lines. It is easy to make.

Polkadot, satin or crepe it may be. But whatever material you choose you're bound to look becoming in this model. The designs come in nine sizes: 36, 38, 40, 42, 44, 46, 48, 50 and 52. Size 40 requires 4 1-8 yards of 39 inch material plus 1-2 yard contrast.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF.

Mirror Will Tell You

By Alicia Hart

All of this modern talk about correct posture may seem a little confusing to the woman who cannot go to an expert to have an analysis made of her figure. She, after all, has to rely pretty much on her own judgment, and if she has no rules and an chart to guide her, she may be labouring under the false impression that her posture is perfect when, as a matter of fact, it is quite incorrect.

A full-length mirror is really your most reliable consultant. And, if you happen to be lucky enough to own one of those luxurious full-length, triple mirrors, there's no reason in the world why you can't see for yourself just how you look to others. Be honest with yourself. If your hips protrude admit it and then do something about it. If shoulders slope in ungainly fashion, causing little hollows around your collar bone, that too should be corrected.

The ideal figure is the one that possesses an almost straight backbone. The depression in the centre of your back should be ever so slight—really a small curve and not a hollow at all. The shoulders should be held back and the chest should be raised always. Your head must be up, of course, but keep the chin in—not down—in and up! Then you'll never have to worry about acquiring a "dowager's hump" on the back of your neck.

FASHION NOTES

(From a Paris Correspondent.)

The new suits are most engaging and most surprising, not as to cut, which is of the classic order, but as to medium. Any material will do, it seems, from faconne jersey to linen, marocain, crepe-de-Chine, &c. The blouses are often made of lame—unspeakably smart.

There is an emphasis on basques, both on the jackets of suits, where they are rather restrained, and around the "slim" of dresses, where they cut loose and frolic in a host of ways.

The romantic sweeping capes of Morocco must have inspired some of the newest evening wraps. They are full length, flowing affairs that hang straight from the shoulders and give grace to any woman's walk. One well-known Paris designer carries out the idea in grey wool, with a grey wool skirt and a sleeveless lame jumper.

Bangs are returning again, but must be chaperoned by the swirl to be truly correct. In one of the most fashionable head-dresses, a swirl carries the hair to the left, where the ends are finished in a series of straight bangs.

A few wisps are turned backward, to soften the severity of line. "First Nighters" colours in Paris have all their elaborate details in the rear. Here, intricate arrangements of curls and waves break forth. The front view stresses simplicity, so that the coiffure will not compete with the dazzling diadems that are having a vogue.

YOUR CHILDREN.

Too Much Interference

By Olive Robert Barton

"Impulse." What does it mean? Is it a desire or an act? It is both. It originates in the mind itself, seeks expression in doing, and results either in a feeling of contentment, or disappointment, dependent upon whether or not it is permitted to be completed.

A child conceives an idea, he wants to carry it out. The machinery of his mind is set in motion full tilt and his body gets orders from its master to finish it. Minds are tyrants and they don't willingly let go until they are satisfied.

Impulse is an excellent promoter. It is also a parent. It fathers initiative, ambition and perseverance. This is why it is important for a parent to understand the dangers of too much interference in Johnny's daily experiments that sometimes take him beyond the bounds of propriety, or what we consider proper. We hear so much about "frustration." And its companion "interrupted impulse."

Effect of Frustration
Don't turn away because they have three syllables. The meaning of each is easy to understand. A boy wants to build a shanty. He has been wanting to for a year. His judgment tells him there is no real reason why he can't. He has tools, boards, and a place for it. But he cannot get permission. He broods and dreams over it. The impulse has started, and his mind calls for satisfaction.

He never gets permission. This is frustration. In time he seems to forget the desire, even if he is not conscious of it. But his mind retains it somewhere tucked away in its archives. And the disappointment colours his conduct. At first he is ill-humoured and disobedient, but in time the apparent resentment loses its edge. It would seem as though all were right with the world again and with him. However, we now know that accumulated frustrations leave in their wake unhappy and even abnormal dispositions. A constantly frustrated child is seldom happy and usually is cranky. The story is told.

Frustration applies to the simplest things—a child can be frustrated fifty times a day. Certainly he cannot be permitted everything, but it is best not to overdo. This explains much poor conduct.

As to "interruption," it means cutting off an impulse after the desire has been conceived and the act is partly finished.

Concentration Affected
Mary is deep in colouring a paper-doll dress with crayons. It is nearly finished and her interest is at top pitch. The collar and cuffs will look wonderful done in yellow. Her mother says impatiently, "Throw out that rubbish at once. I'm cleaning."

An accumulation of interrupted impulses has the same goring influence as frustration. Moreover, repeated experiences shatter the powers of concentration and perseverance. In later life her mother may wonder why Mary cannot stick to anything and finish it. Or even why her daughter never takes an interest in anything at all.

Zest for living and trying and accomplishing lies in completed impulse. The basis is interest, and interest is at the root of almost everything that has ever been accomplished in the world. Sometimes we don't know it, but in one form or another it is there at work shaping our conduct and destinies.

Married Flirts

by MABEL
McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY

GYPSEY MOORE and TOM WEAVER are married the same day as LILA MONTAGUE and DEREK BLISS. Lila expects to live in luxury, while Gypsy intends to go on with her job, teaching in a settlement.

After returning from a honeymoon in Europe Lila asks the Weavers to dinner. Among the guests is the wealthy MARKO BROUGHTON, who once asked Gypsy to marry him. He showers Gypsy with attentions and Tom is jealous.

Meanwhile Gypsy has a job on Saturdays, cataloguing his library and Gypsy accepts without telling Tom. Just as she finishes the work she is taken ill and the doctor tells her she is going to have a baby. Tom insists she must give up her job at the settlement. Gypsy is happy keeping house and Lila comes back from a winter in Florida and asks her to luncheon. Gypsy realises her clothes are shabby in comparison with Lila's and is hard on Gypsy. Then a friend who lives on Long Island loans the Weavers her home.

CHAPTER XX

They had been established in the little blue-roofed house for two weeks now and life had taken on a different hue. Was it possible, Gypsy thought, awakening in her narrow green bed, looking out at the interlocking branches of apple trees just beyond her window, was it possible that 14 days ago she had been possessed by a very mad desire of despair and sickness? The air of this place renewed her. She sang about her work now. Everything was fun—marketing in the little car, boiling fat lobsters until they were scurled, steaming clams for Tom's dinner, stringing beans in the deep-cushioned swing in the garden.

Mrs. McKinnon's small house seemed a very paradise to her after the cramped walls of the flat. The brass kettles twinkled, the water sang a little tune of its own as it gushed into the dishpan, beds were made to the accompaniment of robins and thrushes. Roses bloomed in the dooryard and peonies and mock orange made a screen for the kitchen garden. Could life be so different?

Yes, it was a new Gypsy who moved about the bare, neat little rooms. Sometimes in the evenings it was cool enough to have a fire lighted on the hearth and neighbours dropped in, friendly people who lived down the road and wanted to share their largesse of flowers and advice with the newcomers.

Gypsy filled the vases with flowers. She dusted and sewed and read, all with a full and happy heart. Life was glorious and complete.

One afternoon she was sitting in the garden swing, shelling peas into a wooden bowl, happily planning a dinner of chops and salad and custard, when she heard the purr of an expensive motor in the drive. She looked up hastily to see an expensively shod and stockinged foot emerge from the tonneau, and throw her apron over the peas, hating herself for the snobbish impulse that prompted the gesture but unable to prevent herself from doing it.

Presently the clack of high heels sounded on the flagstone walk and Gypsy rose to greet her visitor. Her eyes widened.

"Lila, my dear! However did you find me?"

Her caller was exquisite in white—simple and perfectly made frock of dull crepe with a little jacket, white hat still on her shining golden waves.

"I rang up your apartment and the operator told me," Lila was glancing about her with appraising eyes, taking it all in, the pleasant, rather shabby garden, with no pretension about it. Just a tangle of old-fashioned flowers and overgrown shrubs.

Gypsy cleared a space for her on the swing, pushing books, vegetables and bowl aside. "But how nice to see you," she said. "I've been wondering where you were and what you were doing."

Lila was thin, petulant, restless. Her eyes roved, her conversation was gay and morbid by turns. Things were dull, she said. Everybody had gone abroad. There was absolutely nothing to do. Through her discourse wove the thread of discontent, although the happenings she sketched sounded, to Gypsy's simple soul, dazzling enough. The garden party at the Tewksburys, the fete at the Chisholms, the bathing, teaing, dancing existence that was the sun of Lila's daily round.

"My dear!" she murmured indulgently. "You have no idea— you simply have no idea how dandy it is. Sometimes I think I'll run away to Majorca, to Bali, or some place where one doesn't have to see people."

Now it was Gypsy's turn to be amused.

"I hear those places are crowded, too," she said with a pleasant laugh. To distract Lila, she offered a promise of tea. She had bought some little cakes in the village that morning, pink and white ones, looking like cakes for a children's party. These she offered her caller on a tin tray painted green, with the ice clinking delightfully in the amber glasses. "This is nice," Lila offered, laying aside her gloves, her expensive-looking bag, to accept the plate Gypsy offered. "You're a very comfortable sort of person, do you know that, my dear? There's something about this garden, simple as it is. . . ." She did not finish the sentence, but Gypsy knew what she meant. And indeed the peace and simplicity of the place laid cool hands upon you. There was a sort of magic there, for those wise enough to find it.

Gypsy told her friend something of the stress of the past months; her feeling of weakness and misery, the heat of town, their release when Tom had found this place. Lila laid her long, slim-fingered hand on her cheek and looked at the younger girl with wide, serious, concerned eyes.

"But my dear, why didn't you let me know? You might have come to us."

Now she was more like the old playmate Gypsy had played sand tag with on the beach in Maine so many happy summers. She had for the moment dropped her air of boredom and artificiality and was simply another girl, sympathetic, sincere and loving.

Gypsy laughed aloud at the picture of herself, in her old gingham and dimities, among Lila's Southampton crowd. "You're awfully kind," she said. "It's sweet of you to say that, but I didn't want to leave Tom, anyhow."

The heat of the afternoon deepened around them. Birds sang in the bushes and a salt breeze blew off the Sound and still Lila stayed on.

Gypsy asked about Derek and it seemed to her that his young wife answered hastily and almost coldly, that she turned her eyes fleetingly away.

"He's all right. He's splendid," she added most unconvincedly. What was the matter with Derek these days, Lila asked herself with resentment. He was always tired, taciturn, reserved. You grew tired of playing up to a man's moods. She, herself, didn't believe in it. Men ought to realize—her father always had—that the woman, the wife, was the important cog in domestic affairs. She was the one to be petted, amused, made happy. It was the man's business to make as much money as possible, to surround his wife with lovely things, give her the setting she deserved.

She wasn't like Gypsy, to be contented with a hearth and blue aprons and a rickety little car. She had to have life, movement, colour. What was it Marko had said to her the other night: "You're like some wild bird, bird of paradise, flashing by." Marko said things like that, made you feel young, precious, infinitely desirable. She said abruptly, "Marko's wonderful, isn't he, Gypsy? I wonder you ever had the courage to refuse him."

Gypsy looked up, surprised. "Why, yes, I suppose he is. But marriage . . ." Her voice trailed away, her eyes were on the glossy foliage of the Claudius Fernot rose bush just under the living room window. Marriage with Marko Broughton! Out of the question, her rebellious heart said. Marriage meant Tom and shared simple meals and apricots in a green bowl.

"Why, I couldn't have married Marko," Gypsy said wonderingly. What was Lila thinking of?

Lila shrugged her shoulders. It was none of her business, after all. "Hilda Blanchard often asks

Did you say heat wave? A million New Yorkers sought relief in Coney Island, where a general view of the crowd is afforded.

The idea of settling down comfortably in a little nest by the water came to this cool on finding a discarded life preserver in a lake at South Norwood, the London suburb.

With Coast Guardsmen forming a guard of honour, the flower-covered coffin of the late Mr. William H. Woodin was borne from Fifth Avenue Presbyterian Church in New York following brief funeral services which were attended by President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Kodak Vollenda uses the new Panatomic Film

AN outstanding example of miniature camera, Kodak Vollenda have anastigmat lenses with speeds up to F.2.8... a Compur shutter that splits seconds to 1/300... Its bellows extend at the touch of a button... ready in a flash for instant action. Priced from $36.45 up. Vollenda makes sixteen exposures on any roll of No. 127 (vest pocket) film. We suggest for this and all other miniature cameras two new films: Kodak Super Sensitive "Pan"—sensationally fast, fully colour sensitive; and Kodak Panatomic—exceedingly fine grained, for superior enlargements.

Kodaks Six-16, 2 1/2 x 4 1/4 Six-20, 2 1/4 x 3 1/4 precision cameras

STRIKING appearance, rare convenience, splendid photographic ability are ingeniously combined in these new model Kodaks priced from $21.00 up.

Their Kodak Anastigmat lenses admit plenty of light for good results with quick exposures on dull, grey days or in deep shade or indoors near a window. And the new Kodak Super Sensitive Panatomic Film greatly increases the variety of picture chances—allows snapshots in artificial light. The Kodak shutter has speeds of 1/10 to 1/100. Their hinged back and spool sockets assure easy, swift loading.

The new exceedingly fine grain Panatomic Film is also available for the Six-20 Kodaks

about Tom," she said carelessly after a moment. "She thought he was marvellous looking. Hilda's a bit of a devil," she added admiringly.

Gypsy felt the colour rise in her cheeks. She knew it was foolish to care. It was horrid, too, to be so possessive, but she just couldn't help it. She hated that girl who had behaved so outrageously at Lila's dinner party. "She's very attractive," was Gypsy's contribution. But Lila had already forgotten Hilda in some recital of a real or fancied grievance. Did Gypsy remember the Ranson Howes? Well, they had been at Newport—they didn't go to Maine any more—and Ellen Howe had rung her up to say they'd like to come down to luncheon. They had all descended, bag and baggage, a week before, with four dogs. "My dear, can you believe it? Four! And Noggins (that's my new show) was in a beast of a temper. I was a wreck when they pulled out."

Gypsy listened, agreed, nodded. She had a feeling that under Lila's chatter there was a deep undercurrent of restlessness, a hidden meaning. Lila was talking at random. She didn't really care what the Howes did, nor how long they had stayed.

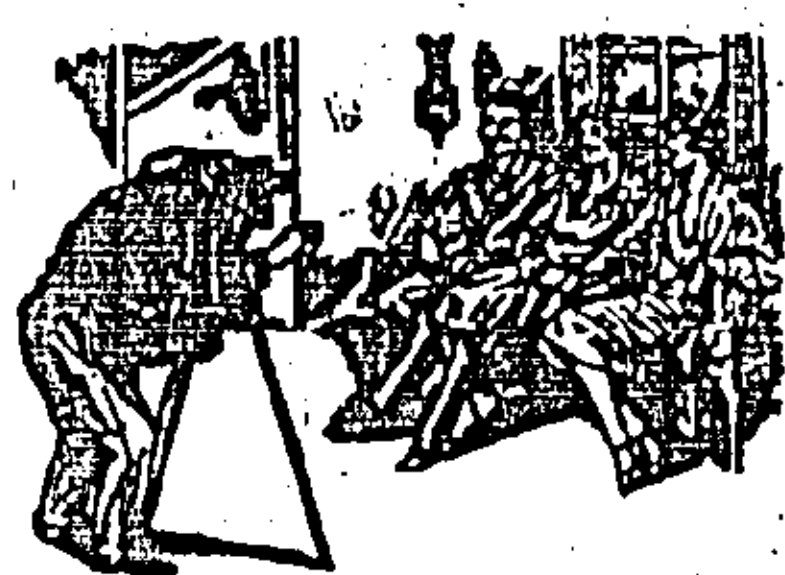

It all seemed very petty and shallow and (in spite of the electricity and glamour) rather sad. Lila's life was one valiant pursuit of pleasure and apparently she seldom achieved her aim. Gypsy enjoyed the unwonted sensation of feeling sorry for her friend. The contrast between them was great: one thin, brown, eager, with apricot tints in her cheeks and lambent lights in her brown eyes; the other willowy, elegant, scented, all in purest white, with rings on her slim fingers and paint on her lovely, restless, unhappy mouth. And yet, of the two, Gypsy felt the richer—the more content.

At long last, Lila rose to go. She would be slain, she said, when she arrived home. There were guests for dinner and she hadn't ordered the flowers. Koto would be in vile humour. He always was. With outstung hands, Lila implored Gypsy's sympathy on this point. "Servants, my dear," she said, with raised brows. "Servants!"

She seemed oddly loath to go. At parting she held Gypsy's hand fondly. "I didn't tell you what I came to say," she said in a half whisper. "I have something to ask you. Most important. But it will have to wait."

NINE FACTS ABOUT THE MARCUS SHOW

A reputable merchant has no hesitancy in acquainting his patrons with the facts about his goods. We are merchants, purveyors of entertainment. It is but fair to you, our patrons, to lay down 60 cts. or 60 cts. or $1.00 or $2.00 or $3.00 or $4.00 for a ticket to see the Greater MARCUS SHOW, should know precisely what your money will buy.

FACT I

The Greater MARCUS SHOW is the largest theatrical troupe ever to come to China from the United States, there being some seventy persons in the entourage. The company closed its Transcontinental Tour of the States with an engagement at the Columbia, San Francisco's leading legitimate playhouse, February 5, and embarked immediately thereafter on the first leg of a round-the-world good-will tour that is scheduled to occupy the next fifteen months.

FACT II

The Greater MARCUS SHOW is an organization of twenty-seven consecutive seasons' standing under the management and ownership of A. B. Marcus. In the States it is regarded as a standard attraction and is not a fly-by-night outfit hastily assembled for a junket to the Far East.

FACT III

The Greater MARCUS SHOW carries a repertoire of three different and distinct extravaganzas, LA VIE PAREE, BROADWAY-MERRY-GO-ROUND, and OKAY!!! All are full length productions, running approximately two and three-quarter hours and each divided into twenty-eight or more colourful and unique episodes, many highly spectacular tableaux and some piquantly daring.

FACT IV

In general character the three extravaganzas to be presented by the Greater MARCUS SHOW might be included in the category identified with such American contributions as Ziegfeld's "Follies," George White's "Scandals," Earl Carroll's "Vanities" or the Messers. Shubert's "Passing Show." The performances are designed for the sophisticated entertainment of adult theatregoers and are not particularly recommended as a pastime for adolescents.

FACT V

Despite the huge costs of transporting a large company and wealth of paraphernalia long distances, the scale of prices in Hong Kong will not exceed those in vogue for the Greater MARCUS SHOW in the United States. Matinees will be given daily with prices of 60c. * $1 $2 * $3. At 5:30 p.m. Night performances will start promptly at 9:15 p.m. Motors and carriages may be ordered for 11.50 p.m. Evening prices will range from 60c. to $4. Bookings may be made at theatre.

FACT VI

The Hong Kong engagement is strictly limited. Subsequent bookings and necessity of conforming to maritime schedules preclude any extension of the local run. LA VIE PAREE, first of the Greater MARCUS SHOW cycle, will be presented, commencing Sunday.

FACT VII

The Greater MARCUS SHOW is owned and operated by A. B. Marcus, a reputable American business man and an experienced and successful showman.

FACT VIII

The foreign tour of the Greater MARCUS SHOW is under the personal direction and sponsorship of Charles Huro, long identified with Amusement Enterprises in the Far East and for many years a highly respected resident of Hong Kong.

FRIDAY, JUNE 8, 1934.

THE FUTURE OF THE COLONY

It is noteworthy that many of the suggestions put forward at the annual meeting of the Hongkong Chinese Chamber of Commerce, with a view to hastening trade recovery locally, are based on a conception of the Colony's future which is in rather sharp contrast to that traditionally held. Hitherto, Hongkong has been regarded as little other than a distributing centre for the South China markets, and in consequence of the lessened movement of goods, its trade has naturally suffered. Some of the proposals advanced at the Chamber meeting envisage the Colony as something more than a mere clearing-house, aiming rather at its development along industrial lines. There can, of course, be no questioning the point: that Hongkong might, with advantage to itself, become much more of a producing centre than it now is. The future may, in fact, show remarkable expansion in this direction. But doubts naturally arise as to whether the present time is propitious for branching out in this new field of endeavour. It is easy to visualise the growth of factories, and to plead for Government help in the way of special facilities for the acquiring of land for such purposes, but all this presupposes a readiness on the part of those with capital to come forward and initiate new ventures. Is that spirit prevalent, and is there reason to think that financial backing for any large-scale development at the present time would be available? These are pertinent questions, which go to the root of the whole question. One further aspect of the matter is that whilst really worthwhile industrial expansion may be worthy of future consideration, any movement which would result in the perpetuation of sweated labour is not deserving of encouragement. The lesson to be drawn from these considerations is that Hongkong should at the moment proceed warily in the matter of industrialisation. Eventually, side by side with its continuance as a distributing centre, the Colony may develop along new lines, but with the China markets obstructed by excessive tariffs at the moment, progress in this direction must be slow. One suggestion put forward at the Chamber meeting is worthy of support, namely, the formation of a permanent consulting body, consisting of European and Chinese bankers, merchants and industrialists, to exchange ideas periodically on the economic position of the Colony and to explore ways and means of improving local trade. No better time than the present, when business is sluggish, could be chosen for initiating such a movement.

NOTES OF THE DAY

POLITICS IN INDIA

It may safely be inferred from the Government of India's withdrawal of the pronouncement of proscription against the Congress Party that the political situation has greatly improved, despite the reappearance of Swarnaj as a political programme and condemnation of the White Paper proposals. Hint that such action was under consideration was given, of course, when the Congress leaders were permitted to hold the conference re-establishing the Swarnaj Party without any attempt at official interference. The dropping of civil disobedience and other modifications in the activities of Congress may be attributed in part to Gandhi's experiences as the champion of the Untouchables. Caste violence can hardly have failed to have had some influence upon his political philosophy. Democratic forms cannot amount to much where social stratification is so full of cruelty.

POPULATION PREMIUMS

The highly original suggestion of Senator Tydings that population be taken as the yardstick for calculating the defence needs of the nations bears a semblance of simplicity that is deceptive. The scheme, briefly, is to set an armaments standard for the first half-million and allow every nation to build on that standard up to the total of its population, with a declining ratio for every half-million after the first. It is obvious, at once, that the plan would fall far short of requirements, for while it would be possible to allow, say, 50,000 tons of warships per million of population, the distribution of naval tonnage among warship categories would still furnish plentiful controversy. Then again, it is impossible to believe that France would accept the proposition, with her population of 40,000,000 compared with Germany's 60,000,000. A yardstick that sets a premium on fecundity instead of strategic needs is hardly likely to commend itself outside the United States, even if the trifling fact that it would give America the largest fighting service in the world was overlooked by Senator Tydings.

BARTHOUD PRODUCES

M. Barthou comes forward at last with concrete proposals for facilitating the work of Disarmament Conference. His resolution is framed on eminently practical lines and promises this much at least, that the delegates will get down to work instead of arguing in a loose general debate. Two influences seem to have stirred the French leader to action, a real prospect of Germany's return to Geneva, and Mr. Henderson's pungent summary of the feeling of nearly all other governmental delegates in regard to France's obstructionist tactics.

FRANCE AND GERMANY

If there is a genuine prospect of France and Germany getting together again, as M. Barthou hinted, and as the Saar Agreement confirmed, it would be the best thing that could possibly happen in the present critical stage. M. Barthou threw the door wide open and was careful to reaffirm that Germany will re-enter the portals of the conference on a basis of complete equality of rights. As Germany feels well satisfied with the Saar proposals and as Herr Hitler has insisted, again and again, that the Saar alone affords an issue of contention between France and Germany, Geneva may well feel justified in breathing a little more freely.

FUTURE FLIGHT

Prof. Auguste Piccard, the dauntless Belgian who flies into the stratosphere for recreation, believes that man may some day solve the problem of interstellar travel and make round trips to the moon or to some of the planets. It is his notion that this may become possible, not through the use of rocket engines or by firing huge projectiles from gigantic guns, but through discovery of the secret of disintegrating matter. He says that the disintegration of 120 pounds of lead, for instance, would provide ample energy for a round trip from the Earth to the planet Mercury. His theory sounds, undoubtedly, remarkably like a pipe-dream, and it probably shows that scientists, no less than any other men, have moments in which their imagination runs a trifle wild. But it makes a nice picture, and whether well-based or not, it is something to look forward to.

FASCINATION OF CRIME

By ANTHONY ARMSTRONG

THE subject of crime, as dealt with to-day in detective stories, "thrillers," and plays possesses a popularity and fascination that many a film star might well envy.

Nor are there any signs that this popularity is on the wane; indeed, the number of "thrillers" increases yearly, and even Cabinet Ministers and captains of industry are not ashamed to say in public that they often like to curl up with a good thriller. To confess to an enjoyment of crime fiction has even nowadays become a new form of highbrowism. Those of the intelligentsia who some years ago would almost sooner have been caught laughing at something in "Punch" than reading "The Clue of the Twisted Goldfish," now openly wallow in finger prints and bloodstains on the printed page. You know, one really gets quite fascinated with the stuff," they will say. "It takes one out of oneself."

Now, no one can deny that the discovery on page 7—let alone in real life—of Sir William Murgatroyd on the library floor with his face removed by some blunt instrument, cannot help but disturb the peace of even the most phlegmatic; but the real fascination is not that it takes you out of yourself but that it, so to speak, takes yourself out of you. In other words, it releases the potential criminal in you. For we are all potential criminals; the thing is so deeply implanted in us as to be almost a primitive instinct.

It originally sprang into being, as far as I remember—the actual incident, of course, was before my time—with the expulsion of Adam and Eve from the Garden of Eden. The first murder, the first theft, the first lie, all the things that keep life from becoming dull, occurred after the evacuation of the Eden property. Previous to this, crime had not been invented—not even the smallest of small lies, or Adam and Eve might well have attempted to establish a water-tight alibi for original sin. All that stuff came later, and the first criminals, by the way, must have been exceptional people, almost in the same class as those unknown geniuses who first thought of the wheel, or the drinking-cup, or the sling.

How superior the first liar, say, must have felt himself to the other and more innocent folk—around him, to whom it had not yet occurred that there could be such a thing in the world as a misstatement of plain fact! It must have given the first thief, for instance, quite a sense of creative achievement to discover that by the simple process of going at night and transferring a dozen of his neighbour's sheep to his own fold, he thereafter had a dozen more sheep; while his simpler-minded neighbour was bitterly lamenting the amazing "Mystery of the Disappearing Sheep," and was completely unable, in his own undeveloped criminal state, to account for the phenomenon.

Later on, of course, many other people began to catch on to the racket, and the community suddenly realised that a new thing called theft had been discovered. The game at once became overcrowded, but whether some peculiarly subtle and strong-armed fellow managed to acquire every sheep in the tribe, or whether stealing became so popular that the wretched sheep began to suffer from never being able to spend more than one night in the same place, history does not relate. Anyway, by the time effective steps in the way of laws and penalties had been taken to curb the universal enthusiasm for the new invention, everyone was at heart a potential thief. But perhaps I digress. . . .

The point is that deep down inside, we all love crime because we are potential criminals, and since the barrier between love and hate is admittedly a frail one, we are all potential detectives as well. Whether these instincts are allowed to take a more practical form depends on circumstances. The opportunities for embarking on a career of detection are limited, and while the opportunities for indulging in crime are nearly always present, so, too, is the probability of getting caught—and there's no fun in that.

So we take to exercising our criminal instincts within the covers of a book, or from the tip-up seats of a theatre. It is almost a form of sublimation. So far from inciting to wrongdoing, crime plays and novels are possibly an effective safety-valve; and, no doubt, are equally helpful in preventing the scene of even the smallest burglary being overrun by a flood of amateur detectives.

The most harmless of little men reading a book in a corner seat of the 5.40 is not Thompson, of The Laurels; he is at the moment "Blackmask" climbing along the roofs at midnight with his pockets full of stolen pearls, and the police in pursuit—and he is having the time of his life. He doesn't know whether he will be caught or get away, but whichever it is, he knows it won't be for a hundred and fifty pages yet, as he is only halfway through the book. During that period he will be cunning, desperate, daring, will make an ill-gotten fortune—may even shoot a policeman or so. Though if he does that, he knows he will be caught, shot, self-poisoned, or somehow rubbed out in the end.

Law and order must triumph in a crime-novel, unless the hero is the type of criminal who steals from the rich to give to the poor, or for some other sentimental reason, and is always allowed to get away with it in print. As Leacock once said: "His name's on the title page; you can't kill him!" In real life it doesn't always work out like that—you try it and see; especially if you get caught after having stolen from the rich and before you have time to give to the poor. And if Thompson does get caught in the last chapter it doesn't worry him. Probably he has switched over already to the detective's end of the game; but even if he hasn't he doesn't have to do time for the next seven years; he embarks on another career of crime as soon as he can get to the library.

Perhaps this time the potential detective in him will come to the

The Very Idea!

FROM BAD TO VERSE

By Eddie Kelly, Shortfellow

Having retired now from the two hardest jobs of our life—writing daily for the "Very Idea," and village blacksmithing, we think it is fairly safe to tell you something about our life as "The Village Blacksmith."

We were rather a brawny chap in our time, with arms like iron bands and a voice like brass bands. As a matter of fact, the villagers used to call us a mighty man.

It was the same with our Editor when we ran the "Very Idea." We lost our job as a humourist because the Editor thought we were a mighty man—sometimes we might do the job, and then again we might not.

Our poor wife died of pellagra, otherwise known as parrot's disease.

If you were to ask us did she have any last words, we would reply, "Yes, all of them"; however, as you haven't asked us, we won't go into the matter.

Our three daughters were all named after flowers.

There was Geranium, the eldest, who used to sit on the horses' chests while we shod them. Then there was Petunia and Snapdragon.

We were flinging a horse over the fence one day when a goofy-looking bird wandered in and said that he wanted his nail-file retouched.

We got talking after a while, and we found out that his name was Longfellow. He said he was a poet by trade, and that the poetry business had gone to the dogs.

It had, in fact, gone from bad to verse.

When he said it had gone to the dogs, we picked up our ears, and asked him if he had written the poem about "Who's afraid of the Big Bad Wolfe." He said, "No," as he didn't own a dog, and, besides, he couldn't find any word to rhyme with Kowloon or summation.

"If you like, though," he said, "I'll dash off a line or two about you."

Well, we told him he could have a stab at it, but that fellow got us all wrong. He said we loved to hear our daughters sing at church. That we used to actually go to church to listen to them.

Say, we ask you! Geranium, we'll admit, had had a fair voice—she was a caricature soprano, and was always in demand for the Philharmonic. But the other two used to frighten the horses if they only hummed. We could knock out better tunes on the bellows. And as for going to church . . . if you've ever been a blacksmith you'll know that Sunday is the only day in the week that a man can get a bit of exercise.

As a matter of fact, Petunia has since got a job as a feghorn on a lighthouse, and is doing well. She writes to us regularly, enquiring about the church and one thing and another, and sends us a brace of songbirds every now and then.

Well, well, well. The Editor has left the office at last. That man is so suspicious about us that he stands over our shoulder until we've almost finished our job. As there's no one else left whom we can't knock stiff, we think we'll also depart.

Marvelous how one's enthusiasm for work peters out in this hot weather. Well, if it doesn't Peter, it Pauls. (Biblical quotation.) Off to bed now, children.

P.S.—You will all be sorry to learn that since writing the above two things happened. The Editor returned suddenly, and we have passed away, greatly mourned. The village hearth was decorated with flags and bunting, the occasion was made a public holiday, and a good time was had by all.

It is believed that we died as the result of a cold, caught while shoeing draught horses.

Old Casper, when interviewed, said that it was a famous victory for the draught horses. He also said that if we had sat in the sun telling lies to our daughter, Wilhelmine, instead of fooling around with draught horses, our funeral would never have occurred.

Seeing that we never had a daughter called Wilhelmine, we consider this most unsporting. Anyway, if we did have a kid anything like that brat, we'd put ground-up glass in her porridge.

You can't get really fond of a child that's always bowling skulls about the place. The whole family was inclined to be a bit morbid.

Casper's son, Casperblanca, was the village idiot who went away to sea and set fire to the boat. The mutt then stood there on the burning deck when all but he had made a bolt for the open spaces.

Which reminds us; just before he left the village, Longfellow wrote another poem. Something like this:

"'Twas evening, and the setting sun
Was sinking in a fog
When a big, brave policeman laddie,
Rapid a little dog

The dog, it had no muzzle,
The policeman's stop grew faster,
"I'm going to gain promotion,
With a summons for its master."

"Why, the pup may have the robes,
I couldn't put it past it."
So they fined the desperate criminal
Do you wonder, he said . . .

For the life of us, we can't remember what the name of the dog said. It was something that rhymes with "past it." We must ask Longfellow when we see him. That will be all until next Friday.

Come down to the family vault and see us some time.

"This is my daughter June—she's just at the awkward age."

GUARD RIVALRY

SHOOTING INCIDENT ON FATSHAN RECALLED

Jealousy over the appointment of a Sergeant of ship's guards was advanced by the Crown as the motive in a shooting incident which occurred on the steamer Fatshan on April 11, the Court sequel to which was heard before Mr. Macfadyen, at the Central Magistracy, yesterday afternoon.

Sarwan Singh, a Sikh guard on the steamer Fatshan, was charged with shooting another of the guards, Thakot Singh, with a revolver, with intent to inflict grievous bodily harm, or to maim, disfigure or disable him.

The charge was amended from attempted murder, the latter charge being brought against Sarwan Singh at a previous appearance.

The Assistant Attorney General (Mr. J. A. Fraser) in opening the case for the Crown, said that on April 6, the Sergeant of ship's guards on the steamer Fatshan fell sick, and the question arose as to who should fill the appointment. No. 781, on his recommendation, was appointed by the Chief Officer provisionally to the post, but some days later a counter-application came from Mussa Singh, a money-lender, but at one time also a ship's guard. The guards sought to exclude Mussa Singh, and, on April 11, when the boat was returning from Canton, representations to this effect were made to the Chief Officer by No. 781, who had the support of Thakot Singh. A change in duties occurred on the trip, and it is alleged that Sarwan Singh, then guarding the grille protecting the forepart of the upper deck, came forward and fired a shot at Thakot Singh with his service revolver. The wounded man staggered to the starboard side of the vessel and there collapsed.

Meanwhile a struggle was taking place between No. 781 and Sarwan Singh for the possession of the revolver. Sarwan was finally disarmed after the ship's officers came on the scene, and was handcuffed.

A friend of Mussa Singh, the accused, was said by the Crown to have sought the appointment of the money-lender against the wishes of other members of the guard. In reply to the Police charge, he said that he had taken opium mixed in wine and did not know what he was doing.

Appeared Strange.

Dr. Thomas, of the Government Civil Hospital, said he saw accused at 12.05 a.m. on April 13 in the Mental Hospital. Accused's behaviour was strange, and he was very talkative. His eyes appeared to be very bright, and he was smiling all the time and was very restless. He did not smell any alcohol on accused. He did not notice any tremors when accused held up his hands. On the whole the impression he gained was that accused was under the influence of some drug, but what it was he could not say. Opium or some of its allied groups might have produced that effect. His impression was that accused knew what he was doing. Accused's memory was sound, but he was not insane. It was possible accused might have had some Chinese wine containing opium.

Dr. D. J. Valentine, of the Government Civil Hospital, deposed to having examined the complainant. The bullet had penetrated the left lung, causing considerable haemorrhage within the pleural cavity, and he did not think the lung could be normal again. At one time it was quite likely that accused might have died from his injury.

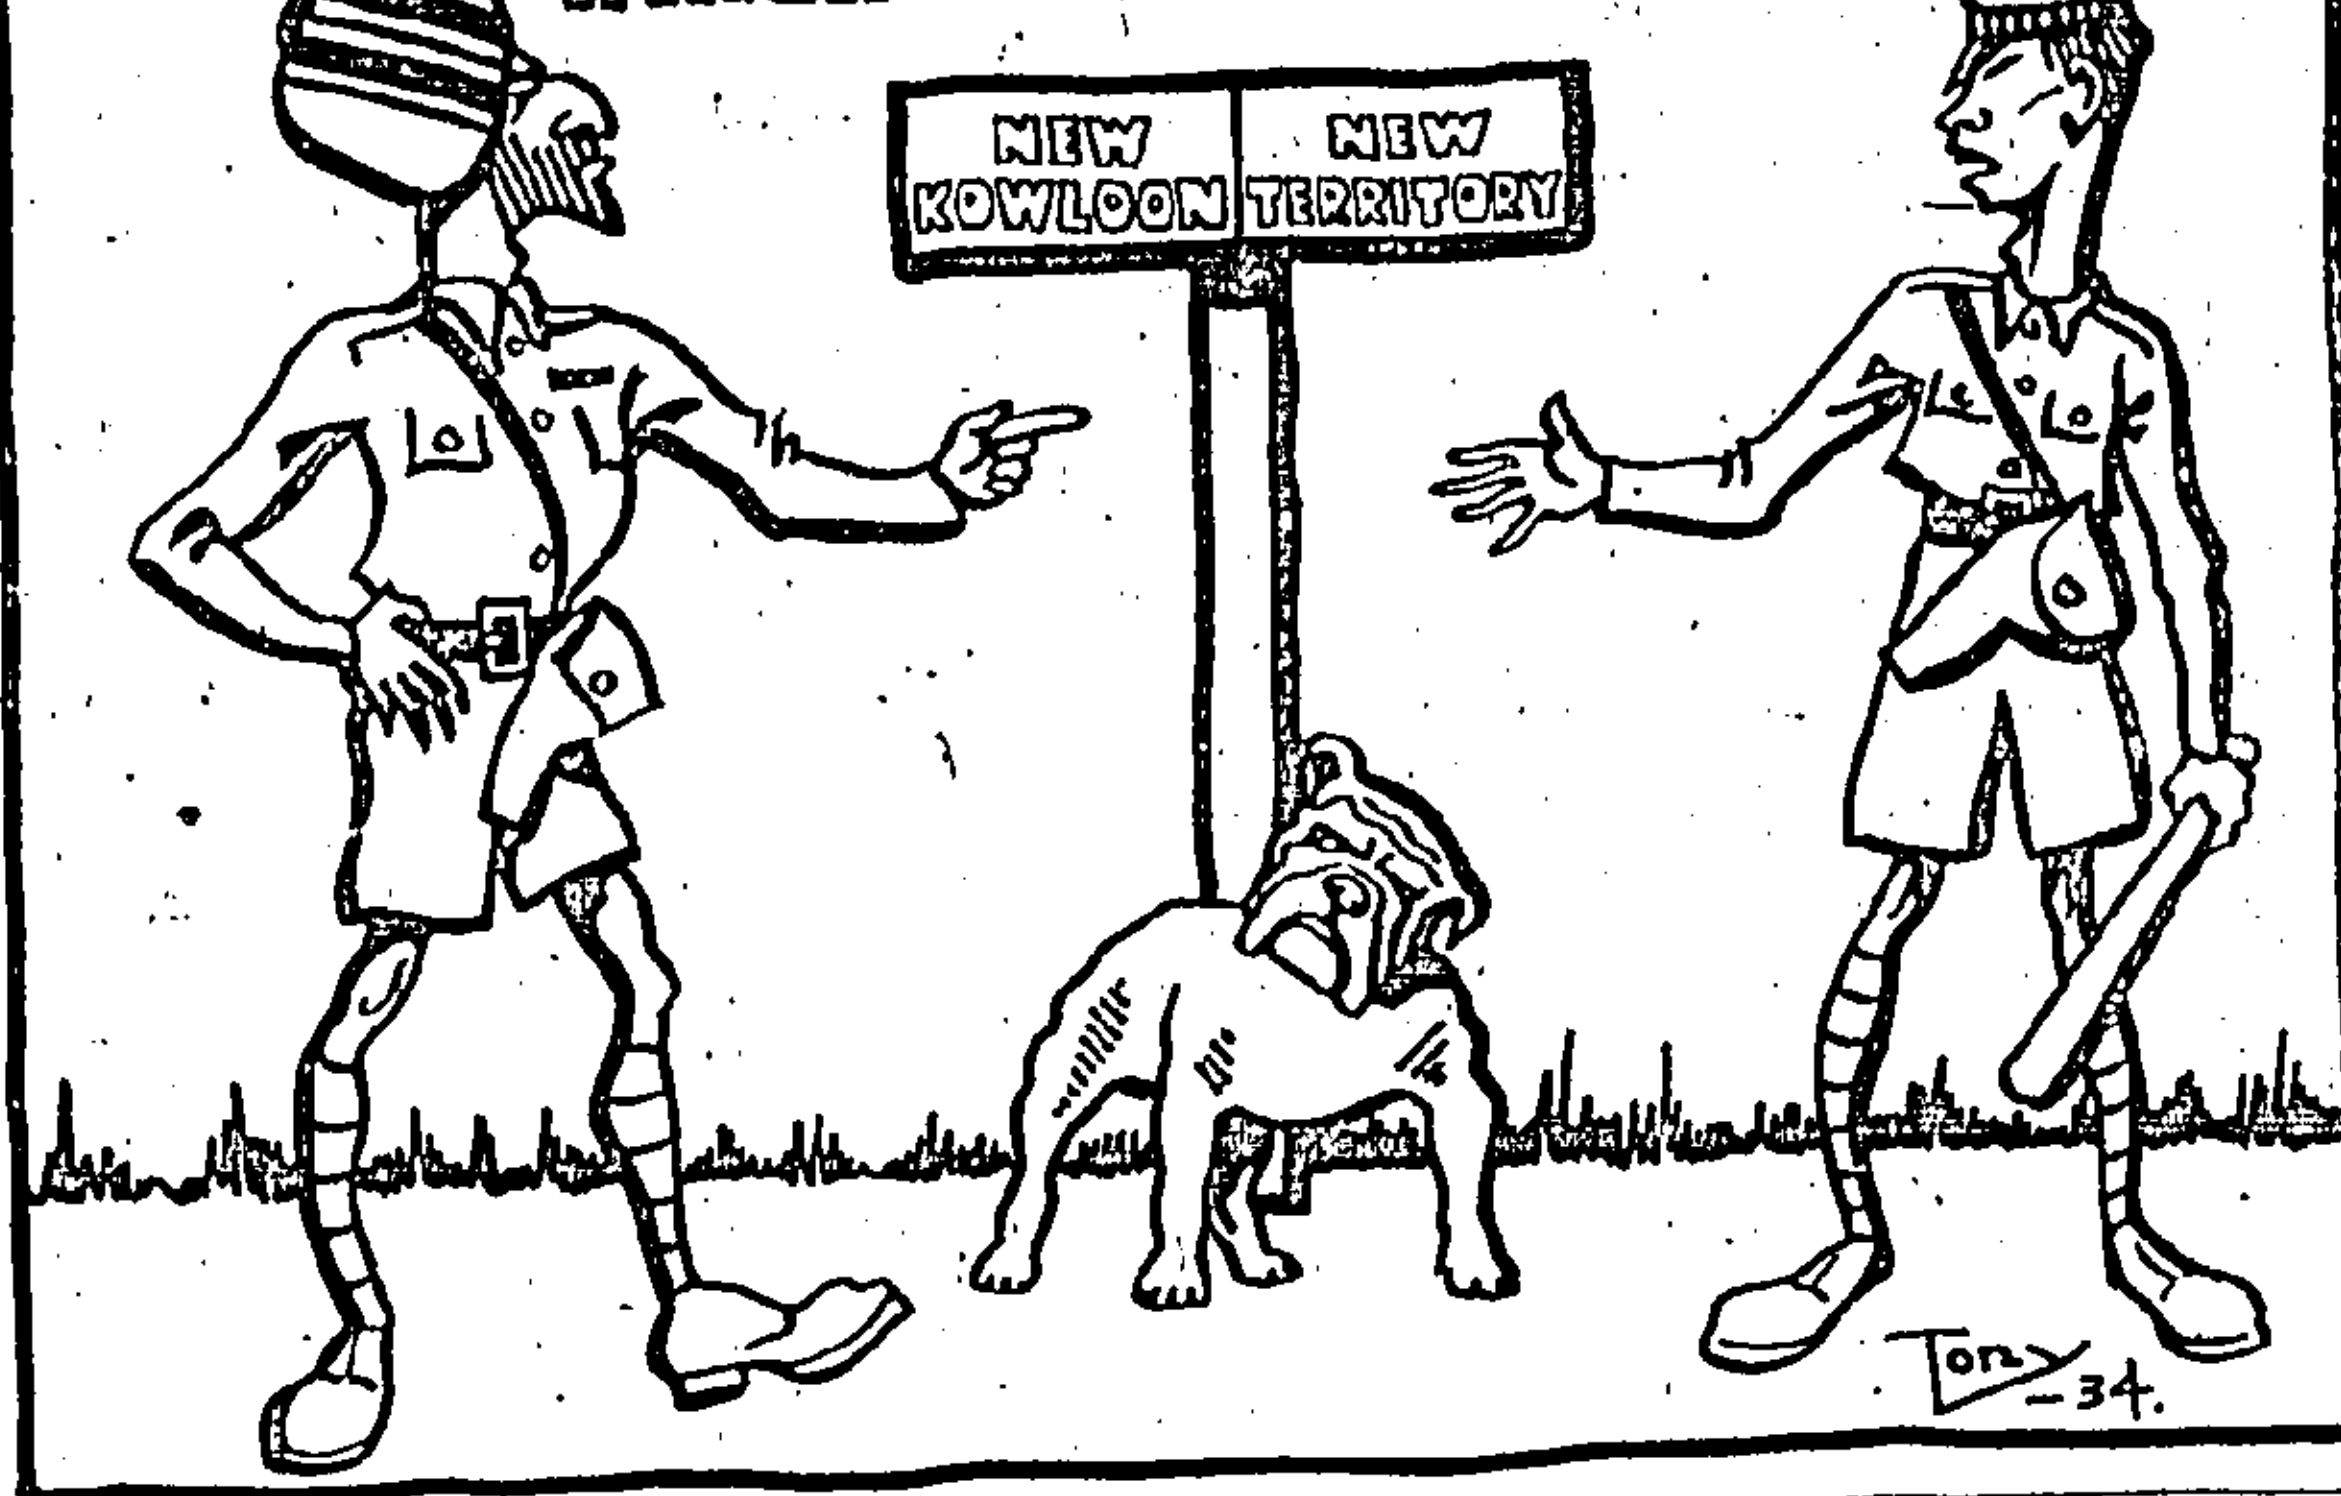

Dr. Valentine also said that he had accused under observation for ten days, and he came to the conclusion that accused was perfectly sound in mind.

A berth plan of the steamer Fatshan was produced by Mr. J. R. Kinghorn, of the China Navigation Company, after which Sergeant Moran produced photographs of the ship. Sergeant Scott, the Police armourer, said that the revolver produced in Court, was a .38 long imitation Smith and Weston revolver with six cylinders. Witness also gave expert evidence on the bullets produced in Court.

How Trouble Broke.

Complainant, Thakot Singh, in evidence, said that he did not want Mussa Singh to be the No. 1, and wanted some other man in the Police Guard to assume that post. Before April 11 he was on good terms with accused, but after Mussa Singh's arrival, accused did not speak to him, the reason being that accused wanted Mussa Singh to be the No. 1.

Witness then described the events which led to the shooting. The ship left Canton at 4.30 p.m. on April 12, and he was on duty. He was relieved by accused at 5.30 p.m., and when he returned after ten minutes,

NERVY NANNING

TRENCHES BUILT ROUND THE CITY

Nanning, June 4. Nanning is at the moment the centre of war rumours, although General Pei Chung-hsi has been trying in vain to calm the people. In the course of a public speech, he declared: "We are not planning war, but we are determined to be prepared if an enemy attacks us." The "preparation" has consisted in the construction of modern trenches around the city. Already, trenches have been constructed at Luichow and Kweilin.

The people are in a state of ferment, apprehensive of a clash between the forces of General Chiang Kai-shek and those of the traitor Kwangsi.

As a consequence of the conditions prevailing, the value of the Kwangsi paper dollar has declined by about 12 per cent. This is not altogether surprising, because on at least two occasions within the memory of residents their money became worthless overnight.—Our Own Correspondent.

RUBBER GROWERS' CHAIRMAN

London, June 7. Mr. James Fairbairn succeeds to the chairmanship of the Rubber Growers' Association, vice Mr. Gallagher.—Reuter.

Chan King, a ratman worker, at 269 Taiman Street, Shamshui, who was admitted to the Kowloon Hospital yesterday with an abdominal wound, is said to have come by his injury through accidentally falling on the point of a work knife.

The wedding is announced to take place shortly of Mr. Ho Yuk-lun, of Butterfield & Swire, Ltd., and Miss Chan Kit-mei residing at 49, Shek Kip Mei Street, Shamshui.

Two cases of typhoid and one case of meningitis were reported to the local health authorities on Wednesday.

Guard No. 781 admitted him through the grille. Accused then came through the grille, and said that the chief officer wanted both of them. They approached the door slowly. Accused had shut the door. He asked accused to open the door, and accused opened it, and shot him. The bullet struck him on the left side of the chest, and he ran to the starboard side and collapsed. He did not draw his own revolver.

Complainant admitted he had seen accused taking some opium at noon that day.

The hearing was adjourned until 2.30 p.m. on June 12.

DR. ALLEN'S LECTURE AT THE
HOP YAT CHURCH

An interesting lecture, under the auspices of the Chinese Y.M.C.A., was given at the Hop Yat Church last night by the Rev. Dr. E. L. Allen.

Addressing those present, Dr. Allen said: "If there is in this world any spring of progress other than the insight of the conscience and the courage of the individual men and women, it is not individual men and women, it is to be found, easy to see where it is to be found, in the 'preparation' action."

What we call 'corporate action' turns out on analysis to be action, taken out on analysis of the individuals, which a majority of the individuals composing a society is persuaded to take at the prompting of a few who are in advance of the rest.

It is easy to speak of words to conscience, but to be true to conscience, by no means easy. The best of us in which we can nerve ourselves to it is by looking back upon some of those who can stand in this matter as examples for us. I want to tell the story of a man who had lived in simplicity and directness by the Light within.

The Journal of John Woolman was in the unaffected record of the life of a tailor in a New England country town, his searchings of heart and the work to which he found himself called. He was born in New Jersey in 1723, and was introduced from the outset to the simplicity and piety of a Quaker household. He tells us that he gave way at a time to 'wantonness' but it was not likely to be inclined to take anything. Much more important was the impression which he tells us was left on him from his early years, the impression that in past ages people who walked in uprightness before God in a degree exceeding any that he knew or heard of now living. As he thought over this, he asked himself why such things should not be possible in his own day, and in the silence of his own mind, for worship, he vowed to follow where the Light might lead him. He tells us that in his 23rd year he resolved 'in all things to act on an inward principle of virtue' to take conscience as his guide.

The first test came just about this time. He was employed as an assistant in a local shop, and his master one day instructed him to draw up a bill of sale for the transfer of a negro woman, the customer being a white woman. kindly of heart, is shown by his attitude when war broke out between England and France, involving the colonies of the two Powers. War-taxes were levied, and drafts of young men were ordered for military service. John Woolman refused to countenance those who merely wished to shirk their duty, but he came forward as the spokesman of the young men who had conscientious objections to the draft. But he was somewhat perplexed when he heard that two soldiers were to be billeted in his house. What was he to do about it? A moment's silent consideration gave him the solution. Of course, he could not possibly refuse to open his house to two fellow-men, but he could decline to take the money! Later on, one of the officers met him in the street, and thanked him for his generous action. Woolman was silent. Returned home, it occurred to him that his silence might be misconstrued. So he sought out the officer, and explained from what motives he had acted. Nor was his attitude to war a purely negative one. For when, at another crisis, the frontier broke out into hostilities and a fort was captured by the Indians, he ventured unarmed into the interior and among the hostile tribes on an errand of peace-making.

Superstitions. One special protest he felt himself called to make was against what he spoke of as 'superstitions', any kind of needless and excessive expenditure. As he saw it, the luxury of the few are made possible only by the poverty and want of the many. He was especially distressed when, on his journeys, he was entertained in a

He knew that, as far as he was concerned, he must share the poverty of the many rather than the luxury of the few. This it was which made him insist on travelling austerely when he crossed to England, and what he saw then of the hardship of the seaman's lot laid yet another cause upon his heart.

FASCINATION OF

top. Clue after clue, invisible to all others, will the keen eye of Detective Inspector Thompkins, C.I.D., seize upon and explain. And—what is so satisfying to the potential detective in us—he knows he'll be right in the end. No false theories, mistakes, or months of back-breaking research for him, just a swift flash of the old instinctive deduction—or, as we should say, a darned good guess; and he's right all the time. So much better than real life.

In fact, that's probably the whole secret of the fascination of the subject of crime as treated in book, play, or film. Whether you are criminal or detective, you do it so much more efficiently than ever you could in a cold, hard world. Outside a book you would probably be a failure. Inside it you are just wonderful—and if that isn't fascinating, what is?

OVERWHELMING

YEAR AFTER YEAR

Chevrolet is proud of its record for leadership in sales—not merely for the sake of leadership, but because this record proves the public's trust and confidence in Chevrolet products. A motor car is an important possession, and its owner is quick to tell his friends about its merits or faults.

Without a sound reputation for manufacturing integrity, with a firm public faith in Chevrolet design, dependability and value, such leadership in sales could never have been established.

The public bought more Chevrolets than any other car, year after year, and in that convincing way the public testifies that YOU can always buy a CHEVROLET with full confidence in its greater value.

MAX BAER'S CONDITION NOT YET GOOD ENOUGH

CAUSTIC COMMENT BY OFFICIAL

Ashbury Park, June 7. Max Baer's physical condition for his title fight against Primo Carnera, which is scheduled for June 14, has aroused the indignation of Mr. Billy Brown, official of the New York State Athletic Commission, who today visited Baer at his training quarters.

After watching Baer at work, Mr. Brown exclaimed: "If that is the best the challenger can do the match should be postponed, or called off entirely."

Mr. Brown is recommending a postponement of the fight at a meeting of the Athletic Commission which is being held tomorrow, at which both Max Baer and Primo Carnera will be present. —Reuter.

BAER THE PLAY BOY. The Commission official's visit to Baer's training camp was made as a result of an announcement by Baer's manager, Anell Hoffman, that the challenger had not yet reached the peak of condition, and he therefore asked for a week's postponement of the fight to allow his protegee time to develop his condition.

Baer, who it was stated some time ago had become a "playboy" of Broadway, being extremely popular with the women and one who enjoyed New York's night life, temporarily forsook the boxing ring for the films, and was featured in a full length production entitled "The Prizefighter and the Lady."

Baer, who is a real fighter and has a terrific punch, is generally considered the most likely conqueror of Carnera, the Italian giant, who held on to his world heavyweight crown somewhat precariously during the last twelve months.

REVIEW OF THE LAST RACE MEETING

FAVOURITES GIVE PUNTERS ANOTHER BAD DAY

"STAR" NOMINEES DISAPPOINT WITH MEDIOCRE DISPLAYS

SURPRISING PERFORMANCES

(By "Captain Foster")

Once again the favourites disappointed us last Saturday at Happy Valley, and I think the very heavy showers we had during the afternoon have much to account for, in the indifferent display of the better fancied ponies in their respective engagements, notably Soldier of Germany, King's Bounty, Hetman, Night Star and Vridny. Sadko has always been regarded as a "mud-larker" and his poor performance somewhat surprised me. Perhaps the weight told and, possibly, his hard season may also be partly responsible for the absence of the customary strong finish which has usually landed him a winner in the past.

Before dealing with the racing itself, I would like to refer to the bold policy of the Stewards of the Hongkong Jockey Club which as resulted in placing the "Cash Sweeps" once more on a satisfactory basis.

For various reasons which, however, require no elaboration from me, the prizes of the Cash Sweeps have sadly shewn a considerable falling off—Meeting after Meeting—since the beginning of the current year. The minimum $5 ticket had apparently lost its attraction and we now know that the Stewards must have spent much time in thought to devise ways and means to again popularize the Sweeps.

To break away from tradition is never easy, but the policy decided upon of reducing the sweep to $1 per ticket has solved the problem, and the Sweeps have again come into their own, judging by the highly satisfactory returns paid out last Saturday.

Perhaps it was as well that the torrential rain came down in the afternoon, and not in the morning, as, in that case, the Meeting might have been abandoned.

THE RACING.

Regarding the racing, seven ponies competed for the Beaufort Handicap, in which Lemberg (Harriman) was the pronounced favourite. To a good start, What A Chance (Proulx) immediately jumped into the lead, with the others close up. There was little change until the straight was reached when Lemberg and Bay View (Liang) took command. The latter settled the issue in a few strides, and won very easily by three lengths from Lemberg. William Osler (Heard) beat What A Chance for the third place.

Atlas was well ridden by Mr. Davis to win the Bondi Handicap, in which Night Star (Butler) disappointed me. Just That (Soares) ran up to form to finish second and Saucy Face (Deltz) was half a length further away. A hundred yards from home, it looked as if Atlas was in for a close finish, but he was headed by Mr. Davis' mount well balanced for a final burst and landed him a winner by three quarters of a length. The consistent performer King's Justice (Heard) somewhat astonished me by winning the Cheung Chau Handicap, in which I thought Hetman (P. P. Botelho) had a very good chance of beating the field. It was during this race that the rain came down very heavily and this instantly spelt disaster for Hetman who does not relish heavy going. Cossack's Beauty (Butler) gathered was somewhat unlucky in running, otherwise the verdict may have been different. As it was, he finished second, beating Sadko (Harriman) by three quarters of a length.

A good field of twelve non-winning "subs" faced the gate in the Crocodile Handicap, in which both Utopian (P. P. Botelho) and Young Hero (Carvalho) behaved badly, and were consequently left at the post. A very good race was witnessed and after a hard fought tussle, The Carp (Heard) emerged victorious by beating Bold Commander (Chanson) by a bare length, with St. Ives (Proulx) two lengths away.

Just before the Lantao Handicap, word was passed round that Racing Boy (Deltz) was the pony to follow, and the tip proved correct. Personally I could not see him winning, but he won and with plenty in hand, in fact he turned out to be the easiest winner of the day. Valorous (Heard) was conceding 21 lbs to the winner and found the task beyond him. He could only fill the second position and Wayward Stag (Tang Man-va) a very keen rider of promise) occupied the third place.

DISAPPOINTING "STAR" PONIES.

The "Star" ponies disappointed me in the Green Island Handicap as neither "Bright" nor "Blue" ran three quarters of a length. Prima Donna (Harriman) third, into a place. Soldier of Germany (Soares) did not appear to relish the heavy going. Brechin (Proulx) at once assumed command and led the field until well into the straight, Gladiolus (Heard) challenged and took the lead soon after passing the mile post, and eventually won by finishing fast but could not quite get up.

The best race of the day was seen in the Juling Stakes and the ponies more or less ran true to form. Half-way down the straight, at least six ponies could have been named the potential winner. Excitement ran high as the winning post was being reached and the luck of the stride went to Powerful King (Heard) who eventually won by a head from Warrington (P. P. Botelho) with King's Parade (Soares) half a length further away. St. John (Proulx) led from start to finish and easily won the Manly Handicap by four lengths. Australian Boy (Taylor) finished second and was two lengths in front of The Goose (Butler).

A fine burst of speed landed Helter Skelter (Heard) a winner of the last race, the Luna Handicap, by a length, and in which Gay Butterfly (Soares) and Fudge (P. P. Botelho) finished second and third respectively.

Japanese Women Athletes

GIVE EXHIBITIONS IN SHANGHAI

Shanghai, June 5. The Japanese women athletes who arrived in Shanghai yesterday on their way through to compete in the Women's Olympics to be held in London next month, gave an exhibition at Hongkew Park before more than a thousand school children from the Japanese Premier School and the Japanese Girls' high school.

Under the presidency of Mr. T. Kinoshita, and coaches C. Nambu and Y. Nakazawa, the nine selected women, built on a larger physique than the usual Japanese women, paraded on the field and gave a sterling exhibition of their thorough training and careful exercises.

Outstanding among them are the javelin throwers with records of 40 metres to their credit, and who yesterday threw repeatedly over the 35 metre mark.

Miss K. Itoda, and Miss K. Nakamura, two 800-metre champions, ran the course at a jog trot and then at full race came through with no visible signs of exertion and should give their opponents much keen opposition.

Mr. C. Nambu, their coach has methods of his own to train women athletes and judging by his team's appearance and the rigidity with which they keep to instructions, they should have every opportunity of returning with laurels.

Following are the members of the full team and their previous records:

Miss K. Itoda, 800 metres, 2 min. 28.3 sec.
Miss F. Inui, 60 metres, 7.8 sec.
Miss S. Watanabe, 100 metres, 12.2 sec.
Miss K. Nakamura, 800 metres, 2 min. 28 sec.
Miss K. Kuzuo, 100 metres, 12.6 sec.
Miss T. Yamamoto, Javelin throw, 40 metres, 64 c.m.
Miss Y. Nakino, 200 metres, 27 sec.
Miss M. Mahe, Javelin throw, 39 metres, 34 c.m.
Miss K. Hirashina, 200 metres, 27.5 sec.

MYSTERY OF ENGLISH CAPTAINCY

Selectors' Statement After Long Talk

London, June 7. The composition of England's Test match eleven, or its captain, will not be known publicly until a few hours before the start of the match at Nottingham.

This decision was reached today by Mr. Perrin and Sir Henry Jackson, members of the Selection Committee, after they had had a long talk.

It was then officially stated that no announcement regarding England's captaincy or the composition of the team would be made until to-morrow morning. —Reuter.

PERFECT WICKET.

A message from Reuter, states that the Australian Test team is also being selected this morning.

The weather is fine and the wicket perfect, with indications that much will depend on the luck of the toss.

The conditions would seem to make it imperative for England to play as many fast bowlers as possible, and indications are that Bower, Kenneth Farnes and Nicholls will go into the side, accompanied by either Geary or Verity.

Should Wyatt be pronounced fit, team may possibly be:

R. E. S. Wyatt, Nawab of Patna, K. Farnes, C. F. Walters, Sutcliffe, Hammond, Hendren, Ames, Bower, Nicholls and Verity.

AUSTRALIA'S DAVIS CUP LEAD

WIN FIRST TWO SINGLES

AGAINST JAPAN

ANDREWS BEATEN STRAIGHT SETS

London, June 7. Commanding leads in second round Davis Cup ties were taken by Australia, Italy and Czechoslovakia to-day, when in their respective matches all three nations won the first two singles.

Playing at Eastbourne, Australia and Japan started what was originally expected to be the keenest contest prior to the zone finals and challenge round, but the Japanese, lacking the inspiration of Mro Satoh, made rather a sorry show, and conceded the opening singles somewhat tamely.

It has fallen to Yamagishi and Fujikura to operate as Japan's singles players. Neither player has had Davis Cup experience before, and against Vivian McGrath and Jack Crawford this factor made itself apparent.

Yamagishi succeeded in capturing the first set from McGrath, and went very close to winning the second; but once the young Australian had got on top, he kept Yamagishi on the run with his powerful two-handed backhand drives and volleys.

COOL, CALCULATING CRAWFORD.

Yamagishi warmed to his task the quicker of the two, and carried off the first set quite easily. McGrath, realising the danger of being two sets in arrears, pulled himself together in the second, and by dint of persistent attack, managed to secure it at the twelfth game.

Thereafter the Australian held the upper hand, and was only again seriously challenged in the fourth set, a challenge which he successfully repulsed.

Youthful Fujikura could make no real impression against a machine-like Crawford, who played cool, calculating tennis to win in three sets.

Fujikura made his big effort in the third set, which he took to the twentieth game before admitting defeat. But Crawford always had the exchanges well in hand, playing well within himself.

Australia may not have quite such an easy task in the doubles against Nishimura and Yamagishi, who are regarded as the best combination ever to have been sent out of Japan, and should the Japanese win that tie, they will have a distinct chance of carrying the decision to the last singles, as Fujikura can, on form, hold his own against McGrath.

E. D. ANDREWS OUTPLAYED.

At Prague, the New Zealanders, C. E. Malfroy and E. D. Andrews started poorly against Czechoslovakia, and now have only a very slender chance of winning the tie.

Hecht and Menzel, who performed so creditably in the French Championships won the opening singles, Malfroy taking a set from Hecht, but Andrews being beaten in three straight.

Malfroy was two sets down before he got into his stride, but his success in the third set was such that fluttered only to deceive, for Hecht, calling up his reserves, simply walked away with the fourth stanza, conceding only one game.

C. E. Malfroy and E. D. Andrews, the New Zealand Davis Cup players, both defeated yesterday.

Andrews, well remembered in Hongkong for his exhibitions here, could make no impression on Menzel, who lost only seven games in the course of three sets.

The Italians, G. de Stefani (conqueror of Perry in the French championship), and A. Rado, who last year played doubles, put their country in a sound position against Switzerland.

Both won in three sets, do Stefani overcoming Ellmer and Rado easily accounting for Fischer.

Although without the services of Baron H. L. de Morpurgo, Italy seems assured of entering the third round.

THE RESULTS.

The results, as cabled by Reuter follow:

AUSTRALIA v. JAPAN.

At Eastbourne:—V. McGrath (Australia) beat H. Yamagishi (Japan) 2-6, 7-5, 6-2, 6-4. J. Crawford (Australia) beat H. Fujikura (Japan) 6-3, 6-3, 11-9.

ITALY v. SWITZERLAND.

At Rome:—G. de Stefani (Italy) v. Ellmer (Switzerland) 6-3, 6-3, 6-3. A. Rado (Italy) beat H. Fischer (Switzerland) 6-1, 6-0, 11-9.

At Prague:—L. Hecht (Czechoslovakia) beat C. E. Malfroy (New Zealand) 6-4, 6-1, 4-6, 6-1. R. Menzel (Czechoslovakia) beat E. D. Andrews (New Zealand) 6-1, 6-3, 6-3.

Macao's Next Meeting

SUNDAY'S PROGRAMME LAST FOR FIRST HALF OF YEAR

Next Sunday at Macao will bring an end to racing for the first half of the year, and it is expected that a large attendance will witness an enjoyable afternoon's sport.

A large number of ponies—in fact I understand a record number—have been entered and close finishes should be seen in the majority of the events.

A new departure has been made, as I notice there is a race confined to "riding boys". These lads have been hard at work at Happy Valley trying out their respective mounts, and I think they will account for an interesting and exciting race.

CONTRACT BRIDGE

By W. E. McKenney

There are two types of hands—defensive type hands and declarer type hands. When you pick up your cards, you must first determine which of these types you hold.

If you have a hand containing a lot of aces and kings, wouldn't you much prefer that the opponents play that contract. Then your aces and kings would take tricks, each of which would be worth 100 points or more.

However, if you have a long suit and little high card strength, that is the declarer type of hand. You know that the only tricks you can hope to take are long card tricks.

Too many people are anxious to bid on aces and kings. You need a lot more than that—you need favourable distribution.

The Bidding

That is why South, with today's hand, should not open the contract. If his partner cannot make a weak third hand opening bid, there is certainly no reason for him to step into the bidding.

South makes a serious mistake on this hand in doubling the four spade contract. True enough, it looks as though he certainly could defeat the contract, but his partner has passed third hand, showing that he has an exceptionally weak hand.

If East and West are in a four spade contract against this type of hand, you know that they are in the wrong contract, and you will have a good score on the board.

To double it may just locate the missing high cards that the declarer will need to make his contract or to go down one trick less—and it is better to set the hand two undoubled vulnerable than one trick doubled.

The Play

After the four spade bid, South opens the king of clubs. When he continues with a club, East, the declarer, ruffs it. East now leads a small spade, winning with the king in dummy and returning a small spade, winning with the ace. Now the declarer decides that the only missing high card in which he is really interested is the queen of hearts, and as South has doubled, it at least gives him a reason to believe that South holds that card.

Therefore, he leads the jack of hearts. Of course, South must cover with the queen. A heart is returned and then the ten is played. This establishes the three of hearts for the declarer.

He leads it and regardless of whether or not South ruffs with the queen of spades, the declarer will discard the losing diamond from dummy.

This will allow him to ruff one diamond in dummy so that all he loses is a spade, a diamond, and a

TREATY REVISION

BRITAIN READY TO HEAR SUGGESTIONS

London, June 7.

The Chinese Government was informed on May 19, in reply to its note concerning treaty rights at Tientsin and the Commercial Treaty of 1902, that the British Government was ready at all times to effect such measure of revision as was practicable and desirable, and that Britain was ready to consider suggestions.

Sir John Simon made this statement in the House of Commons today and added that a further note had been received by Sir Alexander Cadogan, British Minister in China, from the Chinese Government, but the text had not yet reached him.

The Foreign Office was studying the report received from Sir Alexander Cadogan at the end of May on the subject of the official residence of the British Minister, and whether it should be at Peking, Nanking or Shanghai, he added.—Reuter.

If South had not doubled, the declarer might have finessed the hearts the wrong way.

Today's Contract Problem

South has the contract at three no trump. West opens the eight of hearts. How should declarer play the hand? And when he plays the diamond suit, what defensive play can East make that will defeat the contract?

STREET DUEL

SHANGHAI BANDIT SHOT DOWN

Shanghai, June 7.
A bandit and a woman bystander were critically wounded at mid-day to-day in a sensational street gun duel between eight gunmen and police.

The eight men attempted to rob the home of a wealthy Chinese woman in the French concession, but she screamed for help when they appeared. They had the servants covered with revolvers at the time.

Police heard the screams of the woman in the house and patrolmen responded. When the bandits attempted to make an escape they were met by police fire. The street was crowded by this time and a rain of bullets flew amongst the people. It was miraculous that so few were hurt.

Three of the desperadoes were captured, one of them probably fatally wounded, but the other five escaped apparently unhurt.—*Ren-

GOLD HOARDING

CENTRAL BANKS' GRIP
PROHIBITS TRADE

Paris, June 7.
Pointed remarks about gold hoarding by central banks have been made by the leading French economist, M. Charles Rist.

M. Rist declares that it is not generally realised that all the gold mined in the world last year was bought by the central banks.

All economic authorities are agreed that a rise in prices is necessary to encourage trade; yet the monetary chiefs are concentrating on prevention of the rise by storing gold in their vaults, without creating the correspondent credits.—Reuter Special.

U.S. Manipulation

London, June 7.
Gold, amounting to over £1-000,000, was exchanged in the London bullion market to-day at a price of 137s. 17½d., being fixed on dollar rate of 5.06½, showing a small discount.

There seems to be no doubt that the metal was taken by the American Exchange Equalisation Fund in order to check the recent sharp appreciation of the dollar.

The heavy gold purchases resulted in large offerings of dollars, with the consequent improvement of sterling in terms of francs and dollars, and also causing the Paris-New York cross rate to fall well below the gold export point.
Therefore the likelihood of further gold shipments from Paris to America has temporarily disappeared.

To-day's gold offerings were due to a special order whose origin it is difficult to ascertain. One bullion dealer stated the bars were German. This is possible as gold valued at nearly £1,000,000 was imported from Germany between May 31 and June 4.—Reuter.

WORLD'S ARMIES

CHINESE VIEWPOINT

London, June 7.
General Yang Chieh, leader of the Chinese Military Mission at present touring England and the Continent, interviewed to-day, spoke with enthusiasm of the plenitude of his visit here, of everyone's kindness and the extensive insight he had been afforded into the workings of the Army, Navy and Air Force units.

He said the Chinese had always known the British Navy was incomparable, and he had discovered it for himself when visiting aboard the battleship H.M.S. Nelson. But he fancied the British Army was no less notable. He was amazed at its perfection, its precision and discipline, combined with flexibility and efficiency.

He expressed, too, admiration for the performances of the Tank Corps.

Making a contrast between the British and French Armies, he said that in France there was a greater freedom and less rigidity, possibly due to the fact that the men were conscripts, whereas the British were professional soldiers.
He did not express any opinion as to the relative values of the systems.

On his visit to Germany he had discovered that the Army had fully recovered its pre-war vigour and efficiency. Its iron discipline was a matter for comment, he thought; and the prevalence of the military spirit was unmistakable.

He had been introduced to Chancellor Hitler, General Yang went on, by the former German advisers to China. He had previously pictured Herr Hitler as a bellicose man, a fire-eater, and actually found him extremely peaceful, broad-minded and cul-

Formidable Red Troops.

In Russia he was impressed, he said, with the formidable appearance of the Red Army soldiers.
They enjoyed a special position in the Soviet and a good many privileges not shared by civilians.
There was a remarkable camaraderie between privates and officers.
Clearly the Russian Army of today was far different from the Czarist armies of the past.

General Yang had a long conversation with Lord Hailsham, the Secretary for War, whom, incidentally, the Chinese visitor curiously resembles about the forehead and eyes.

Lord Hailsham, he said, questioned him closely about conditions in China, particularly with respect to the Communists.

General Yang has been instructed by Nanking to forego the visit to America which he had been planning, but to go to Sweden and see the Bofors armament factory.

He hopes to return to England for the R.A.F. display on June 30 and he is most anxious to see the anti-aircraft guns in operation.—

THE WORLD OF WOMEN

Distinctive Fashion

You will want a hint of small design to make this exquisite A-line look and finish it with a light contrasting collar. Slenderizing are its lines. It is easy to make.

GLORIFYING YOURSELF

Mirror Will Tell You

By Alicia Hart

All of this modern talk about correct posture may seem a little confusing to the woman who cannot go to an expert to have an analysis made of her figure. She, after all, has to rely pretty much on her own judgment and, if she has no rules and no chart to guide her, she may be labouring under the false impression that her posture is perfect when, as a matter of fact, it is quite incorrect.

A full-length mirror is really your most reliable consultant. And, if you happen to be lucky enough to own one of those luxurious full-length, triple mirrors, there's no reason in the world why you can't see for yourself just how you look to others. Be honest with yourself. If your hips protrude admit it and then do something about it. If shoulders slope in ungainly fashion, causing little hollows around your collar bone, that too should be corrected.

The ideal figure is the one that possesses an almost straight backbone. The depression in the centre of your back should be ever so slight—really a small curve and not a hollow at all. The shoulders should be held back and the chest should be raised always. Your head must be up, of course, but keep the chin in—not down—in and up! Then you'll never have to worry about acquiring a "dowager's hump" on the back of your neck.

FASHION NOTES

(From a Paris Correspondent.)

The new suits are most engaging and most surprising, not as to cut, which is of the classic order, but as to material. Any material will do, it seems, from jacquard jersey to linen, marocain, crepe-de-Chine, etc. The blouses are often made of lace—unusually smart.

There is an emphasis on basques, both on the jackets of suits, where they are rather restrained, and around the "slim" of dresses, where they cut loose and frolic in a host of ways.

The romantic sweeping capes of Morocco must have inspired some of the newest evening wraps. They are full length, flowing affairs that hang straight from the shoulders and give grace to any woman's walk. One well-known Paris designer carries out the idea in grey wool, with a grey wool skirt and a sleeveless lame jumper.

Bangs are returning again, but must be chaperoned by the swirl to be truly correct. In one of the most fashionable head-dresses, a swirl carries the hair to the left, where the ends are finished in a series of straight bangs.

A few wisps are turned backward, to soften the severity of line. "First Nighters" coiffures in Paris have all their elaborate details in the rear. Here, intricate arrangements of curls and waves break forth. The front view stresses simplicity, so that the coiffure will not compete with the dazzling diadems that are having a vogue.

Too Much Interference

By Olive Robert Barton

"Impulse". What does it mean? Is it a desire or an act?

It is both. It originates in the mind itself, seeks expression in doing, and results either in a feeling of contentment, or disappointment, dependent upon whether or not it is permitted to be completed.

A child conceives an idea, he wants to carry it out. The machinery of his mind is set in motion full tilt and his body gets orders from its master to finish it. Minds are tyrants and they don't willingly let go until they are satisfied.

Impulse is an excellent promoter. It is also a parent. It fathers initiative, ambition and perseverance. This is why it is important for a parent to understand the dangers of too much interference in Johnny's daily experiments that sometimes take him beyond the bounds of propriety, or what we consider proper.

We hear so much about "frustration." And its companion "interrupted impulse."

Effect of Frustration
Don't turn away because they have three syllables. The meaning of each is easy to understand. A boy wants to build a shanty. He has been wanting to for a year. His judgment tells him there is no real reason why he can't. He has tools, boards, and a place for it. But he cannot get permission. He broods and dreams over it. The impulse has started, and his mind calls for satisfaction.

He never gets permission. This is frustration. In time he seems to forget the desire, even if he is not conscious of it. But his mind retains it somewhere tucked away in its archives. And the disappointment colours his conduct. At first he is ill-humoured and disobedient, but in time the apparent resentment loses its edge. It would seem as though all were right with the world again and with him. However, we now know that accumulated frustrations leave in their wake unhappy and even abnormal dispositions. The constantly frustrated child is seldom happy and usually is cranky. The story is told.

Frustration applies to the simplest things—a child can be frustrated fifty times a day. Certainly he cannot be permitted everything, but it is best not to overdo. This explains much poor conduct.

As to "interrupted impulse," it means cutting off an impulse after the desire has been conceived and the act is partly finished.

Concentration Affected
Mary is deep in colouring a paper-doll dress with crayons. It is nearly finished and her interest is at pitch. The collar and cuffs will look wonderful done in yellow. Her mother says impatiently, "Throw out that rubbish at once, I'm cleaning."

An accumulation of interrupted impulses has the same souring influence as frustration. Moreover, repeated experiences shatter the powers of concentration and perseverance. In later life her mother may wonder why Mary cannot stick to anything and finish it. Or even why her daughter never takes an interest in anything at all.

Zest for living and trying and accomplishing lies in completed impulse. The basis is interest, and interest is at the root of almost everything that has ever been accomplished in the world. Sometimes we don't know it, but in one form or another it is there at work shaping our conduct and destinies.

A Self-Changer!

Married Flirts

by MABEL
McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TO-DAY

GYPSEY MORELL and TOM WEAVER are married the same day as LILA RUTLAND and DEREK HILSON. Lila expects to live in luxury, while Gypsy intends to go on with her job, teaching in a settlement in Hongkong. After returning from a honeymoon in Europe Lila asks the Weavers to dinner. Among the guests is wealthy MARKO BROUGHTON, who once asked Gypsy to marry him. He shows Gypsy with attention and Tom is jealous.

CHAPTER XX

They had been established in the little blue-roofed house for two weeks now and life had taken on a different hue. Was it possible, Gypsy thought, awakening in her narrow green bed, looking out at the interlocking branches of apple trees just beyond her window, was it possible that 14 days ago she had been possessed by a very mad desire of despair and sickness? The air of this place renewed her. She sang about her work now. Everything was fun—marketing in the little car, boiling fat lobsters until they were scarlet, steaming clams for Tom's dinner, stringing beans in the deep-cushioned swing in the garden.

Mrs. McKinnon's small house seemed a very paradise to her after the cramping walls of the flat. The brass kettle twinkled, the water sang a little tune of its own as it splashed into the dishpan, beds were made to the accompaniment of robins and thrushes. Roses bloomed in the dooryard and peonies and mock orange made a screen for the kitchen garden. Could life be so different?

Yes, it was a new Gypsy who moved about the bare, neat little rooms. Sometimes in the evenings it was cool enough to have a fire lighted on the hearth and neighbours dropped in, friendly people who lived down the road and wanted to share their largesse of flowers and advice with the newcomers.

Gypsy filled the vases with flowers. She dusted and sewed and read, all with a full and happy heart. Life was glorious and complete.

One afternoon she was sitting in the garden swing, shelling peas into a wooden bowl, happily planning a dinner of chops and salad and custard, when she heard the purr of an expensive motor in the drive. She looked up, hastily to see an expensively-shod and stockinged foot emerge from the tonneau, and threw her apron over the peas, hating herself for the snobbish impulse that prompted the gesture but unable to prevent herself from doing it.

Presently the clack of high heels sounded on the flagstone walk and Gypsy rose to greet her visitor. Her eyes widened.

"Lila, my dear! However did you find me?"

Her caller was exquisite in white—simple and perfectly made frock of dull crepe with a little jacket, white hat atilt on her shining golden waves.

"I rang up your apartment and the operator told me," Lila was glancing about her with appraising eyes, taking it all in, the pleasant, rather shabby garden, with no pretension about it. Just a tangle of old-fashioned flowers and overgrown shrubs.

Gypsy cleared a space for her on the swing, pushing books, vegetables and bowl aside. "But how nice to see you," she said. "I've been wondering where you were and what you were doing."

Lila was thin, petulant, restless. Her eyes roved, her conversation was gay and morbid by turns. Things were dull, she said. Everybody had gone abroad. There was absolutely nothing to do. Through her discourse wove the thread of discontent, although she happened to sketch sketched, sounded, to Gypsy's simple soul, dazzling enough. The garden party at the Tewksburys, the fête at the Chisholms, the bathing, tea-ing, dancing existence that was the sum of Lila's daily round.

"My dear!" she murmured indulgently. "You have no idea—your simply have no idea how lonely it is. Sometimes I think I'll run away to Majorca, to Bali, or some place where one doesn't have to see people."

Now it was Gypsy's turn to be amused.

"I hear those places are crowded, too," she said with a pleasant laugh. To distract Lila, she offered a promise of tea. She had bought some little cakes in the village that morning, pink and white ones, looking like cakes for a children's party. These she offered her caller on a tiny tray painted green, with the ice clinking delightfully in the amber glasses.

"This is nice," Lila offered, laying aside her gloves, her expensive-looking bag to accept the plate Gypsy offered. "You're a very comfortable sort of person, do you know that, my dear? There's something about this garden, simple as it is. . . ." She did not finish the sentence, but Gypsy knew what she meant. And indeed the peace and simplicity of the place laid cool hands upon you. There was a sort of magic there, for those wise enough to find it.

Gypsy told her friend something of the stress of the past months; her feeling of weakness and misery, the heat of town, their release when Tom had found this place. Lila laid her long, slim-fingered hand on her cheek and looked at the younger girl with wide, serious, concerned eyes.

"But my dear, why didn't you let me know? You might have come to us."

Now she was more like the old playmate Gypsy had played sand tag with on the beach in Maine so many happy summers. She had for the moment dropped her air of boredom and artificiality and was simply another girl, sympathetic, sincere and loving.

Gypsy laughed aloud at the picture of herself, in her old gingham and dimities, among Lila's Southampton crowd. "You're awfully kind," she said. "It's sweet of you to say that, but I didn't want to leave Tom, anyhow."

The heat of the afternoon deepened around them. Birds sang in the bushes and a salt breeze blew off the Sound and still Lila stayed on.

Gypsy asked about Derek and it seemed to her that his young wife answered hastily and almost coldly, that she turned her eyes fleetingly away.

"He's all right. He's splendid," she added most unconvincedly.

What was the matter with Derek these days, Lila asked herself with resentment. He was always tired, taciturn, reserved. You grew tired of playing up to a man's moods. She herself, didn't believe in it. Men ought to realize—her father always had—that the woman, the wife, was the important cog in domestic affairs. She was the one to be petted, amused, made happy. It was the man's business to make as much money as possible, to surround his wife with lovely things, give her the setting she deserved.

She wasn't like Gypsy, to be contented with a hearth and blue aprons and a rickety little car. She had to have life, movement, colour. What was it Marko had said to her the other night: "You're like some wild bird, bird of paradise, flashing by."

Marko said things like that, made you feel young, precious, infinitely desirable. She said abruptly, "Marko's wonderful, isn't he, Gypsy? I wonder you ever had the courage to refuse him."

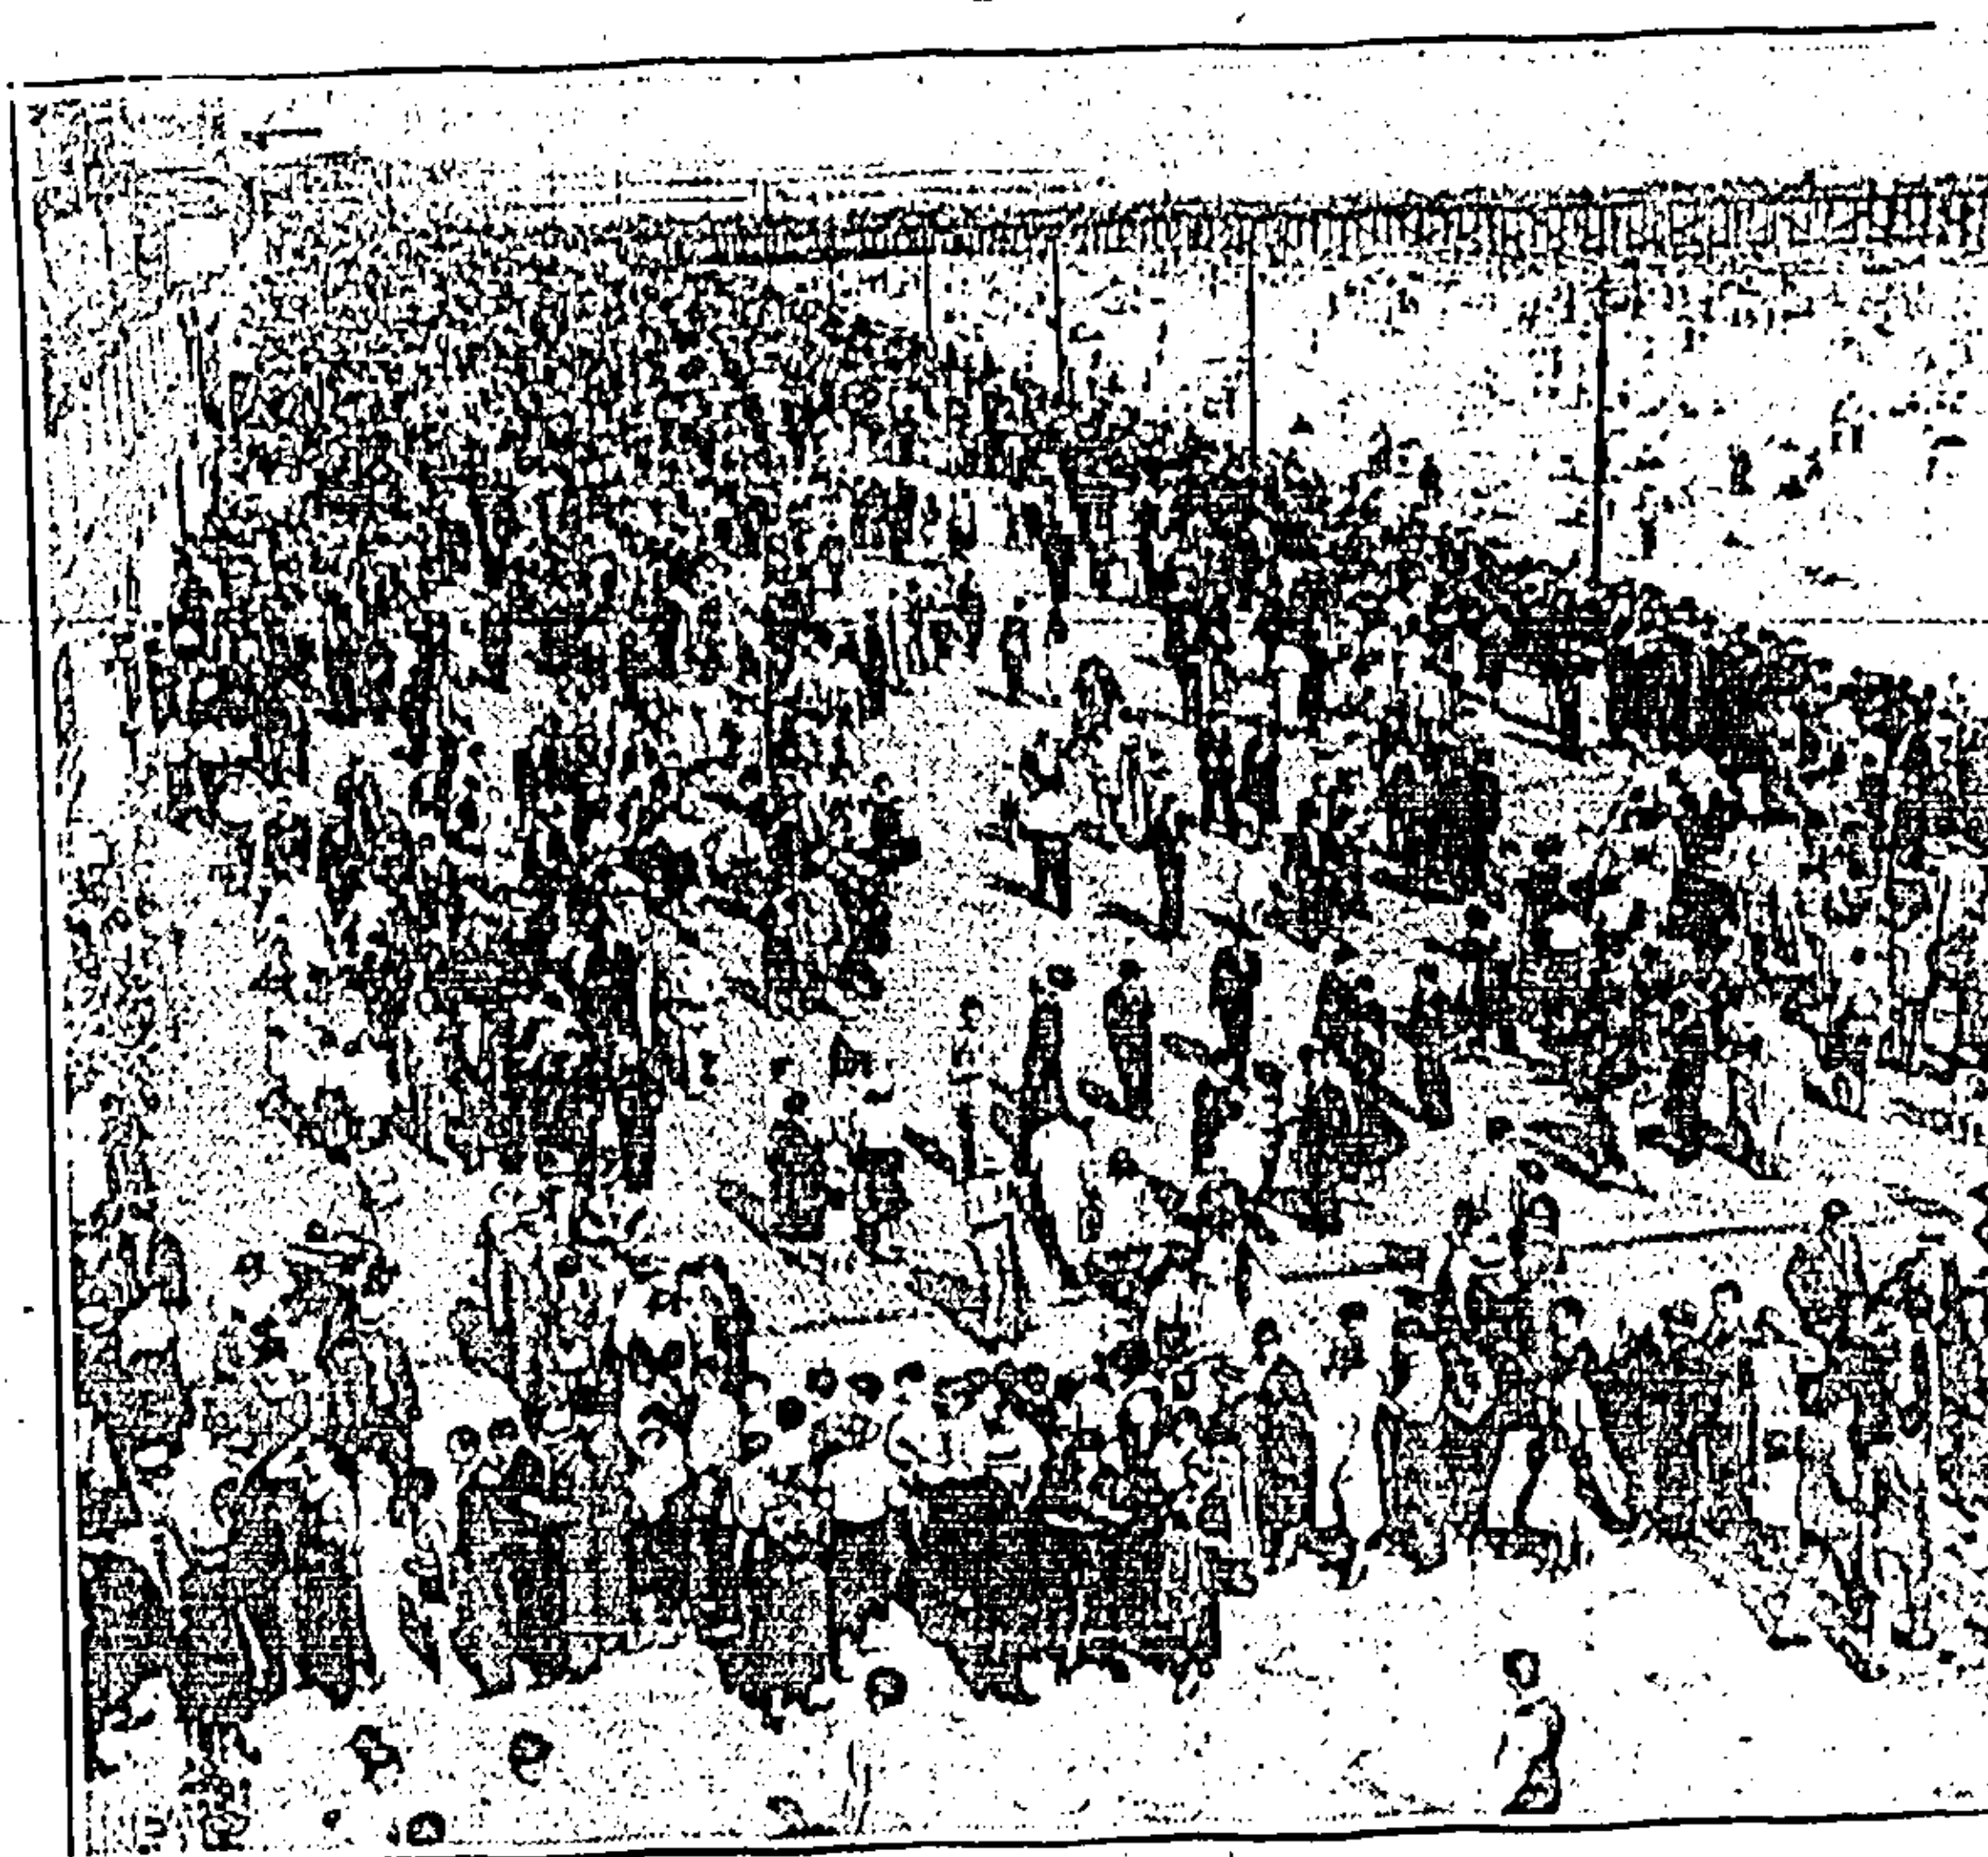

Gypsy looked up, surprised. "Why, yes, I suppose he is. But marriage . . ." Her voice trailed away, her eyes were on the glossy foliage of the Claudius Pernet rose bush just under the living room window. Marriage with Marko Broughton! Out of the question, her rebellious heart said. Marriage meant Tom and shared simple meals and apricots in a green bowl.

"Why, I couldn't have married Marko," Gypsy said wonderingly. What was Lila thinking of? Lila shrugged her shoulders. It was none of her business, after all.

WORLD'S ARMIES

CHINESE VIEWPOINT

London, June 7.

General Yang Chieh, leader of the Chinese Military Mission at present touring England and the Continent, interviewed to-day, spoke with enthusiasm of the pleasantness of his visit here, of everyone's kindness and the extensive insight he had been afforded into the workings of the Army, Navy and Air Force units.

He said the Chinese had always known the British Navy was incomparable, and he had discovered it for himself when visiting aboard the battleship H.M.S. Nelson. But he fancied the British Army was no less notable. He was amazed at its perfection, its precision and discipline, combined with flexibility and efficiency. He expressed, too, admiration for the performances of the Tank Corps.

Making a contrast between the British and French Armies, he said that in France there was a greater freedom and less rigidity, possibly due to the fact that the men were conscripts, whereas the British were professional soldiers. He did not express any opinion as to the relative values of the systems.

On his visit to Germany he had discovered that the Army had fully recovered its pre-war vigour and efficiency. Its iron discipline was a matter for comment, he thought, and the prevalence of the military spirit was unmistakable.

He had been introduced to Chancellor Hitler, General Yang went on, by the former German ambassador to China. He had previously pictured Herr Hitler as a bellicose man, a fire-eater, and actually found him extremely peaceful, broad-minded and cultured.

Formidable Red Troops.

In Russia he was impressed, he said, with the formidable appearance of the Red Army soldiers. They enjoyed a special position in the Soviet and a good many privileges not shared by civilians. There was a remarkable camaraderie between privates and officers. Clearly the Russian Army of to-day was far different from the Czarist armies of the past.

General Yang had a long conversation with Lord Hailsham, the Secretary for War, whom, incidentally, the Chinese visitor curiously resembles about the forehead and eyes.

Lord Hailsham, he said, questioned him closely about conditions in China, particularly with respect to the Communists.

General Yang has been instructed by Nanking to forego the visit to America which he had been planning, but to go to Sweden and see the Bofors armament factory.

He hopes to return to England for the R.A.F. display on June 30, and he is most anxious to see the anti-aircraft guns in operation.—Our Own Correspondent.

Kodak Volland uses the new Panatomic Film

AN outstanding example of miniature camera, Kodak Volland have anastigmat lenses with speeds up to F2.8... a Compur shutter that splits seconds to 1/300... Its bed and bellows extend at the touch of a button... ready in a flash for instant action. Priced from $36.45 up.
Volland makes sixteen exposures on any roll of No. 127 (vest pocket) film. We suggest for this and all other miniature cameras two new films: Kodak Super Sensitive "Pan"—sensationally fast, fully colour sensitive; and Kodak Panatomic—exceedingly fine grained, for superior enlargements.

Kodaks Six-16, 2 1/2 x 4 1/4
Six-20, 2 1/4 x 3 1/4

precision cameras

STRIKING appearance, rare convenience, splendid photographic ability are ingeniously combined in these new model Kodaks priced from $21.00 up.

Their Kodak Anastigmat lenses admit plenty of light for good results with quick exposures on dull, grey days or in deep shade or indoors near a window. And the new Kodak Super Sensitive Panatomic film greatly increases the variety of picture chances—allows snapshots in artificial light. The Kodak shutter has speeds of 1/10 to 1/100. Their hinged back and spool sockets assure easy, swift loading.

The new exceedingly fine grain Panatomic Film is also available for the Six-20 Kodaks

about Tom," she said carelessly after a moment. "She thought he was marvellous looking. Hilda's a bit of a devil," she added admiringly.

Gypsy felt the colour rise in her cheeks. She knew it was foolish to care. It was horrid, too, to be so possessive, but she just couldn't help it. She hated that girl who had behaved so outrageously at Lila's dinner party.
"She's very attractive," was Gypsy's contribution.
But Lila had already forgotten Hilda in some recital of a real or fancied grievance. Did Gypsy remember the Ransom Howes?
Well, they had been at Newport —they didn't go to Maine any more—and Ellen Howe had rung her up to say they'd like to come down to luncheon. They had all descended, bag and baggage, a week before, with four dogs. "My dear, can you believe it? Four!
And Noggins (that's my new chow) was in a basket of a temper.
I was a wreck when they pulled out."

Gypsy listened, agreed, nodded.
She had a feeling that under Lila's chatter there was a deep undercurrent of restlessness, a hidden meaning. Lila was talking at random. She didn't really care what the Howes did, nor how long they had stayed.
It all seemed very petty and shallow and (in spite of the electricity and glamour) rather sad.
Lila's life was one valiant pursuit of pleasure and apparently she seldom achieved her aim. Gypsy enjoyed the unwelcome sensation of feeling sorry for her friend.
The contrast between them was great: one thin, brown, eager, with apricot tints in her brown eyes; the other willowy, elegant, scented, all in purple, white, with rings on her slim fingers and paint on her lovely, restless, unhappy mouth. And yet, of the two,
Gypsy felt the richer—the more content.

At long last, Lila rose to go.
She would be slain, she said, when she arrived home. There were guests for dinner and she hadn't ordered the flowers. Kato would be in vile humour. He always was.
With outlying hands, Lila implored Gypsy's sympathy on this point. "Servants, my dear," she said, with raised brows. "Servants!"

She seemed oddly loath to go.
At parting she held Gypsy's hand fondly. "I didn't tell you what I came to say," she said in a half whisper. "I have something to ask you. Most important. But it will have to wait."

NINE FACTS ABOUT THE MARCUS SHOW

A reputable merchant has no hesitancy in acquainting his patrons with the facts about his goods. We are mercenary pursuers of entertainment. It is but fair to you, you who lay down 50 cts. or 60 cts. or $1.00 or $2.00 or $3.00 or $4.00 for a ticket to see the Greater MARCUS SHOW, should know precisely what your money will buy.

FACT I

The Greater MARCUS SHOW is the largest theatrical troupe ever to come to China from the United States, there being some seventy persons in the entourage. The company closed its Transcontinental Tour of the States with an engagement at the Columbia, San Francisco's leading legitimate playhouse, February 6, and embarked immediately thereafter on the first leg of a "round-the-world good-will tour that is scheduled to occupy the next fifteen months.

FACT II

The Greater MARCUS SHOW is an organization of twenty-seven consecutive seasons standing under the management and ownership of A. B.
Marcus. In the States it is regarded as a standard attraction and is not a fly-by-night outfit hastily assembled for a junket to the Far East.

FACT III

The Greater MARCUS SHOW carries a repertoire of three different and distinct extravaganzas, LA VIE PARÉE, BROADWAY-MERRY-GO-ROUND, and OKAY!! All are full-length productions, running approximately two and three-quarter hours and each divided into twenty-eight or more colourful and unique episodes, many highly spectacular tableaux and some piquantly daring.

FACT IV

In general character the three extraganzas to be presented by the Greater MARCUS SHOW might be included in the category identified with such American contributions as "Ziegfeld's Follies," George White's "Scandals," Earl Carroll's
"Varieties" or the Messrs. Shubert's
"Passing Show." The performances are designed for the sophisticated entertainment of Adult Theatregoers and are not particularly recommended as a pastime for adolescents.

FACT V

Despite the huge costs of trans-

THE FUTURE OF THE COLONY

It is noteworthy that many of the suggestions put forward at the annual meeting of the Hongkong Chinese Chamber of Commerce, with a view to hastening trade recovery locally, are based on a conception of the Colony's future which is in rather sharp contrast to that traditionally held. Hitherto, Hongkong has been regarded as little other than a distributing centre for the South China markets, and in consequence of the lessened movement of goods, its trade has naturally suffered. Some of the proposals advanced at the Chamber meeting envisage the Colony as something more than a mere clearing-house, aiming rather at its development along industrial lines. There can, of course, be no questioning the point that Hongkong might, with advantage to itself, become much more of a producing centre than it now is. The future may, in fact, show remarkable expansion in this direction. But doubts naturally arise as to whether the present time is propitious for branching out in this new field of endeavour. It is easy to visualise the growth of factories, and to plead for Government help in the way of special facilities for the acquiring of land for such purposes, but all this presupposes a readiness on the part of those with capital to come forward and initiate new ventures. Is that spirit prevalent, and is there reason to think that financial backing for any large-scale development at the present time would be available? These are pertinent questions, which go to the root of the whole question. One further aspect of the matter is that whilst really worthwhile industrial expansion may be worthy of future consideration, any movement which would result in the perpetuation of sweated labour is not deserving of encouragement. The lesson to be drawn from these considerations is that Hongkong should at the moment proceed warily in the matter of industrialisation. Eventually, side by side with its continuance as a distributing centre, the Colony may develop along new lines, but with the China markets obstructed by excessive tariffs at the moment, progress in this direction must be slow. One suggestion put forward at the Chamber meeting is worthy of support, namely, the formation of a permanent consulting body, consisting of European and Chinese bankers, merchants and industrialists, to exchange ideas periodically on the economic position of the Colony and to explore ways and means of improving local trade. No better time than the present, when business is sluggish, could be chosen for initiating such a movement.

NOTES OF THE DAY

POLITICS IN INDIA

It may safely be inferred from the Government of India's withdrawal of the pronouncement of proscription against the Congress Party that the political situation has greatly improved, despite the reappearance of Swaraj as a political programme and condemnation of the White Paper proposals. If that such action was under consideration was given, of course, when the Congress leaders were permitted to hold the conference re-establishing the Swaraj Party without any attempt at official interference. The dropping of civil disobedience and other modifications in the activities of Congress may be attributed in part to Gandhi's experiences as the champion of the Untouchables. Caste violence can hardly have failed to have had some influence upon his political philosophy. Democratic forms cannot amount to much where social stratification is so full of cruelty.

POPULATION PREMIUMS

The highly original suggestion of Senator Tydings that population be taken as the yardstick for calculating the defence needs of the nations bears a semblance of simplicity that is deceptive. The scheme, briefly, is to set an armaments standard for the first half-million and allow every nation to build on that standard up to the total of its population, with a declining ratio for every half-million after the first. It is obvious, at once, that the plan would fall far short of requirements, for while it would be possible to allow, say, so many hundred tons of warships per million of population, the distribution of naval tonnage among warship categories would still furnish plentiful controversy. Then again, it is impossible to believe that France would accept the proposition, with her population of 40,000,000 compared with Germany's 60,000,000. A yardstick that sets a premium on fecundity instead of strategic needs is hardly likely to commend itself outside the United States, even if the trifling fact that it would give America the largest fighting services in the world was overlooked by Senator Tydings.

BARTHOLOMEW PRODUCES

M. Barthou comes forward at last with concrete proposals for facilitating the work of Disarmament Conference. His resolution is framed on eminently practical lines, and promises much at least, that the delegates will get down to work instead of arguing in a loose general debate. Two influences seem to have stirred the French leader to action, a real prospect of Germany's return to Geneva, and Mr. Henderson's pungent summary of the feeling of nearly all other governmental delegates in regard to France's obstructionist tactics.

FRANCE AND GERMANY

If there is a genuine prospect of France and Germany getting together again, as M. Barthou hinted, and as the Saar Agreement confirmed, it would be the best thing that could possibly happen in the present critical stage. M. Barthou threw the door wide open and was careful to reaffirm that Germany will re-enter the portals of the conference on a basis of complete equality of rights. As Germany feels well satisfied with the Saar proposals and as Herr Hitler has insisted, again and again, that the Saar alone affords an issue of contention between France and Germany, Geneva may well feel justified in breathing a little more freely.

FUTURE FLIGHT

Prof. Auguste Piccard, the dauntless Belgian who flies into the stratosphere for recreation, believes that man may some day solve the problem of interstellar travel and make round trips to the moon or to some of the planets. It is his notion that this may become possible, not through the use of rocket engines or by firing huge projectiles from gigantic guns, but through discovery of the secret of disintegrating matter. He says that the disintegration of 120 pounds of lead, for instance, would provide ample energy for a round trip from the Earth to the planet Mercury. His theory sounds, undoubtedly, remarkably like a pipe-dream, and it probably shows that scientists, no less than any other men, have moments in which their imagination runs a trifle wild. But it makes a nice picture, and whether well-based or not, it is something to look forward to.

FASCINATION OF CRIME

By ANTHONY ARMSTRONG

THE subject of crime, as dealt with to-day in detective stories, "thrillers," and plays possesses a popularity and fascination that many a film star might well envy.

Nor are there any signs that this popularity is on the wane: Indeed, the number of "those who have their Wallace read" increases yearly, and even Cabinet Ministers and captains of industry are not ashamed to say in public that they often like to curl up with a good thriller. To confess to an enjoyment of crime fiction has even nowadays become a new form of highbrowism. Those of the intelligentia who some years ago would almost sooner have been caught laughing at something in "Punch" than reading "The Clue of the Twisted Goldfish," now openly wallow in finger prints and bloodstains on the printed page. "You know, one really gets quite fascinated with the stuff," they will say. "It takes one out of oneself."

Now, no one can deny that the discovery on page 7—let alone in real life—of Sir William Murgatroyd on the library floor with half his face removed by some blunt instrument, cannot help but disturb the peace of even the most phlegmatic; but the real fascination is not that it takes you out of yourself but that it, so to speak, takes yourself out of you. For we are all potential criminals: the thing is so deeply implanted in us as to be almost a primitive instinct.

It originally sprang into being, as far as I remember—the actual incident, of course, was before my time—with the expulsion of Adam and Eve from the Garden of Eden. The first murder, the first theft, the first lie, all the things that keep life from becoming dull, occurred after the evacuation of the Eden property. Previous to this, crime had not been invented—not even the smallest of small lies, or Adam and Eve might well have attempted to establish a water-tight alibi for original sin. All that stuff came later, and the first criminals, by the way, must have been exceptional people, almost in the same class as those unknown geniuses who first thought of the wheel, or the drinking-cup, or the sling.

How superior the first liar, say, must have felt himself to the other and more innocent folk around him, to whom it had not yet occurred that there could be such a thing in the world as a misstatement of plain fact! It must have given the first thief, for instance, quite a sense of creative achievement to discover that by the simple process of going at night and transferring a dozen of his neighbour's sheep to his own folds, he thereafter had a dozen more sheep; while his simpler-minded neighbour was bitterly lamenting the amazing "Mystery of the Disappearing Sheep," and was completely unable, in his own undeveloped criminal state, to account for the phenomenon.

Later on, of course, many other people began to catch on to the racket, and the community suddenly realised that a new thing called theft had been discovered. The game at once became overcrowded, but whether some peculiarly subtle and strong-armed fellow managed to acquire every sheep in the tribe, or whether stealing became so popular that the wretched sheep began to suffer from never being able to spend more than one night in the same place, history does not relate. Anyway, by the time effective steps in the way of laws and penalties had been taken to curb the universal enthusiasm for the new invention, everyone was at heart a potential thief. But perhaps I digress.

The point is that deep down inside, we all love crime because we are potential criminals, and since the barrier between love and hate is admittedly a frail one, we are all potential detectives as well. Whether these instincts are allowed to take a more practical form depends on circumstances. The opportunities for embarking on a career of detection are limited, and while the opportunities for indulging in crime are nearly always present, so, too, is the probability of getting caught—and there's no fun in that.

So we take to exercising our criminal instincts within the covers of a book, or from the tip-up seats of a theatre. It is almost a form of sublimation. So far from inclining to wrongdoing, crime plays and novels are possibly an effective safety-valve, and, no doubt, are equally helpful in preventing the scene of even the smallest burglary being overrun by a flood of amateur detectives.

The most harmless of little men reading a book in a corner seat of the 5.40 is not Thompkins, of the Laurels; he is at the moment "Blackmask" climbing along the roofs at midnight with his pockets full of stolen pearls, and the police are pursuing him, and he is having the time of his life. He doesn't know whether he will be caught or get away, but whichever it is, he knows it won't be for a hundred and fifty pages yet, as he is only halfway through the book. During that period he will be cunning, desperate, daring, will make an ill-gotten fortune—may even shoot a policeman or so. Though if he does that, he knows he will be caught, shot, self-poisoned, or somehow rubbed out in the end.

Law and order must triumph in a crime-novel, unless the hero is the type of criminal who steals from the rich to give to the poor, or for some other sentimental reason, and is always allowed to get away with it in print. As Leacock once said: "His name's on the title page; you can't kill him!" In real life it doesn't always work out like that—you try it and see; especially if you get caught after having stolen from the rich and before you have time to give to the poor. And if Thompkins does get caught in the last chapter it doesn't worry him. Probably he has switched over already to the detective's end of the game; but even if he hasn't he doesn't have to do time for the next seven years; he embarks on another career of crime as soon as he can get to the library.

Perhaps this time the potential detective in him will come to the

The Very Idea!

By Eddie Kelly, Shortfellow

Having retired now from the two hardest jobs of our life—writing daily for the "Very Idea," and village blacksmithing, we think it is fairly safe to tell you something about our life as "The Village Blacksmith."

We were rather a brawny chap in our time, with arms like iron bands and a voice like brass bands. As a matter of fact, the villagers used to call us a mighty man.

It was the same with our Editor when we ran the "Very Idea." We lost our job as a humourist because the Editor thought we were a mighty man—sometimes we might do the job, and then again we mightn't.

Our poor wife died of polio, otherwise known as parrot's disease. If you were to ask us did she have any last words, we would reply, "Yes, all of them," however, as you haven't asked us, we won't go into the matter.

Our three daughters were all named after flowers.

There was Geranium, the oldest, who used to sit on the horses' chests while we shod them. Then there was Fern and Snapdragon.

We were flinging a horse over the fence one day when a goofy-looking bird wandered in and said that he wanted his nail-file retreaded.

We got talking after a while, and we found out that his name was Longfellow.

He said he was a poet by trade, and that the poetry business had gone to the dogs.

It had, in fact, gone from bad to worse.

When he said it had gone to the dogs, we picked up our cars, and asked him if he had written the poem about "Who's afraid of the Big Bad Wolf?" He said, "No," as he didn't own a dog, and, besides, he couldn't find any word to rhyme with Kowloon or summons.

"If you like, though," he said, "I'll dash off a line or two about yourself. It'll be good publicity for you." Well, he told him he could have a stab at it, but he said he would be all wrong. He said we felt too all wrong. He said we felt too all wrong. He said we felt too all wrong.

Say, we ask you! Geranium, we'll admit, had had a fair voice, but was a caricature soprano, and was always in demand for the Philharmonic. But the other two used to frighten the horses if they only hummed. We could knock out better tunes on the bellows. And as for going to church . . . if you've ever been in a blacksmith, you'll know that Sunday is the only day in the week that a man can get a bit of exercise.

As a matter of fact, Potunia has since got a job as a forghorn on a lighthouse, and is doing well. She writes to us regularly, enquiring about the church and one thing and another, and sends us a brace of seagulls every now and then.

Well, well, well. The Editor has left the office at last. That man is so suspicious about us that he stands over our shoulder until we've almost finished our job. As there's no one else left whom we can't knock stiff, we think we'll also depart.

Marvelous how one's enthusiasm for work peters out in this hot weather. Well, if it doesn't Peter, it Pauls. (Biblical quotation.)

Off to bed now, children.

P.S.—You will all be sorry to learn that since writing the above two things happened. The Editor returned suddenly, and we have passed away, greatly mourned. The village hearse was decorated with flags and bunting, the occasion was made a public holiday, and a good time was had by all.

It is believed that we died as the result of a cold, caught while shodding draught horses.

Old Casper, when interviewed, said that it was a famous victory for the draught horses. He also said that if we had sat in the sun telling lies to our daughter, Wilhelmine, instead of fooling around with draught horses, our funeral would never have occurred.

Seeing that we never had a daughter called Wilhelmine, we consider this most unsporting. Anyway, if we did have a kid anything like that brat, we'd put ground-up glass in her porridge.

You can't get really fond of a child that's always howling skulls about the place. The whole family was inclined to be a bit morbid.

Casper's son, Casperblanca, was the village idiot who went navy to sea and set fire to the boat. The mutt then stood there on the burning deck when all but he had made a bolt for the open spaces.

Which reminds us, just before he left the village, Longfellow wrote another poem. Something like this:

"Twas evening, and the setting sun
Was sinking in a fog
When a big, brave policeman laddie,
Enjoiced a little dog
The dog, it had no muzzle,
The policeman's step grew faster,
"I'm going to gain promotion,
With a summons for its master."

"Why, the pup may have the rabies,
I wouldn't put it past it,"
So they fined the desperate criminal
Do you wonder, he said . . .

For the life of us, we can't remember what the owner of the dog said. It was something that rhymed with "past it." We must ask Longfellow what we see him. That will be all until next Friday.
Come down to the family vault and see us some time.

"This is my daughter June—she's just at the awkward age."

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

YESTERDAY'S MARKET DULL

According to Messrs. Swan, Culbertson and Fritz, the New York market was dull yesterday. Business done 470,000 shares. The Wall Street Journal reports:—The market was duller than for any period in the last ten years and traders are still awaiting developments. A feature was the strength of mining shares due to unaccountably persistent rumours that inflation was directly ahead plus the fight against the silver tax. Gold-mining shares soared due to being regarded as a favourable hedge in the event of inflation. Stocks were depressed due to the labour situation. Curbs were upward. Bonds were irregular. Grains were downward due to the rains in the drought sections.

Messrs. Swan, Culbertson and Fritz's New York office reports:—Stocks: In moderate supply, with prices easier due to uncertainty in the steel and labour situation. The undertone is first. Wheat: Recent rains were beneficial, but were too late to restore the lost acreage. Cotton: The rumour that an increase in the gold price was imminent improved spot demand, but reports of discouraging strike negotiations and fear of increased negotiatory checks buying. Rubber: Featureless. Sugar: Market firm. There is a better demand for refined spots. Soaking rains are urgently needed for the sugar crops. Silver: Growing sentiment against the tax provision is the cause of conflicting rumours from Washington. Speculative buying has been of a meagre and cautious nature.

top. Clue after clue, invisible to all others, will the keen eye of Detective Inspector Thompkins, C.I.D., seize upon and explain. And—what is so satisfying to the potential detective in us—he knows he'll be right in the end. No false theories, mistakes, or months of back-breaking research for him, just a swift flash of the old instinctive deduction—or, as we should say, a darned good guess; and he's right all the time. So much better than real life.

In fact, that's probably the whole secret of the fascination of the subject of crime as treated in book, play or film. Whether you are criminal or detective, you do it so much more efficiently than ever you could in a cold, hard world. Outside a book you would probably be a failure; inside it you are just wonderful—and if that isn't fascinating, what is?

INDIAN RECREATION CLUB VISIT THE CIVIL SERVICE

In the second division, the Indian Recreation Club visit Civil Service in one of the most interesting encounters of the day. Yacht Club have also to go to Happy Valley to play the Football Club, and may find the task anything but easy.

GOLF CHAMPIONSHIP United States Event In Pennsylvania

PLAY COMMENCES

A field of the nation's best professional and amateur golfers will tee off on the first eighteen holes of qualifying play that is part of the United States Open Golf Championship beginning today at the Merion Cricket Club.

The players will participate in 18 holes of medal play to-day and to-morrow with the qualifiers continuing into the thirty-six hole finals to be held Saturday. The player with the lowest aggregate for the 72 holes of play will win the tournament.

Like the 1933 Open, this year's is expected to be a wide open battle for the championship. The course is a tricky one and was the means of Bobby Jones' triumph in the U.S. Amateur that gave him a "ground slam" of the four major titles several years ago.

Since Jones' retirement from competition, the Open has developed into a dog-fight between the "old guard" and the younger player, with no man repeating the following year.

Last year, Johnny Goodman of Omaha became the first amateur since Jones to take the Open. Goodman defeated Ralph Guldahl of St. Louis by one stroke.

The youth versus veteran battle opened this year on the winter fairways and came to something of an anti-climax down in Augusta, Georgia, where Horton Smith subdued a field that included Bobby Jones, to capture the First Master's Invitation Tournament.

Now, the old-timers are on their summer game and will be out on the rolling fairways of the Merion Club prepared to win back some of the prestige they lost during the winter season.

FAMOUS NAMES. Leading the veterans will be Tommy Armour, himself a former Open champion, Walter Hagen, winner of several U.S. Open titles, Johnny Farrell, Mac Smith and Gene Sarazen, who captured both the U.S. and British Open championships in 1932.

Among the younger set will be Goodman, the defending champion, Ralph Guldahl of St. Louis, who sprang a surprise last year by rising from nowhere to finish second; Craig Wood, a consistent performer on the winter course; Gus Moreland, Johnny Revolta, Denny Shute, 1933 British Open champion, Johnny Golden, Horton Smith and Tony Manera.

Other leading players entered in the tournament are four of the American Walker Cup team players—Lawson Little (British Amateur champion), Johnny Fletcher, Jack Westland and Max Marston.

Also in the field are the Dutra Brothers, Olin and Mortie, Clarence Clark, Willie Goggin, Herman Barron, Al Watrous, Henry Clui, Leo Diegel, George Dawson, Lester Holstad, Archie Hambrick, Abe Espinosa, Bob Crowley, Ky Lafoon, Frank Walsh, Harry Cooper, and Bill Schwartz.

Victor Jory and Irene Bentley as they appear together in "Smoky".

NEW RECORD MADE FOR COLOGNE

German Driver Covers Track At 76.5 M.P.H.

Cologne, June 3. Drivers of the new German racing machines triumphed to-day in the annual Eifel auto races. The youthful daredevil Manfred von Brauchitsch in the first Mercedes-Benz car ever to participate here thundered across the finishing line first in the record time of two hours, 47 minutes and 36.4 seconds. The length of the course is 213.8 miles. He thus averaged a speed of 76.5 miles an hour.

Hans Stuck, who had a bad break in the last minute of the Avus races in Berlin last Sunday, crossed the goal 80 seconds later in the new P-car of Auto Union.

The third place was captured by the gifted French driver Louis Chiron in an Alfa Romeo, who swept to a spectacular finish over all German competitors on the Avus a week ago.

A shadow was cast on the brilliant results of the day by a tragic accident in the first 30 seconds of the race when a Bugatti car driven by Frank suddenly turned turtle and bounded into the track fence, a heap of ruins. Frank was thrown yards away and died as the result of a fractured skull before the end of the afternoon.

Messrs. P. Abscher and Cheung U. Fui defeated Messrs. M. H. and Horace Lo in the second session of the final of the Hongkong Consolation Contract Bridge tournament last night.

In the Happy Valley Aggregate, Mrs. Fraser won with a score of 148. The L.G.U. monthly medal competitions are canceled until further notice, owing to the New Course, Fanling, being closed for the summer.

HUMAN FILM COMING TO THE KING'S

"Smoky," the Fox production which starts at the King's Theatre next week, is one of the most unusual films to be brought to the screen.

It is the film story of "Will James' famous book depicting an inseparable bond between man and horse that is all but human.

Victor Jory has the leading role. Irene Bentley is in the cast in the feminine lead opposite him. The author himself is in the picture, bringing to it a note of sincerity and authenticity that made the book the favourite that it was. The film has a sweeping production, filled with the human understanding of a marvellous animal, touched with pathos and real drama.

MARCUS SHOW ARRIVES THIS AFTERNOON

Orchard of Beauty on Tatsuta Maru

If no untoward event occurs within the next few hours the Tatsuta Maru bearing the members of the Marcus Show, seventy in number, will tie up at Kowloon wharf.

The feminine contingent of the big troupe which opens its short Hongkong engagement at the Queen's Sunday matinee, is officially designated as "Marcus Peaches." The troupe embarked at Shanghai on Wednesday after having played a seven week run in that city, claimed to be the record for a foreign attraction in China.

The length of the Shanghai stay is not the only precedent the Marcus Show has shattered since opening its Far East tour at Tokyo March 1. In the Japanese capital the company is reported to have entertained a quarter of a million theatregoers and grossed ¥400,000 during its fifty day stand at Nippon Gekijo, largest theatre in the Orient.

In point of sheer size the Marcus Show is by far the most populous in personnel and comprehensive in scenic, sartorial and electrical production that has thus far come to China and Japan from Europe or America. Another item worthy of remark is the unstinted praise bestowed on the performance by both foreign language and the vernacular press in Tokyo and Shanghai.

NEAR AGREEMENT AT GENEVA

GERMANY'S RETURN IN SIGHT

(SPECIAL TO "TELEGRAPH")

(By Telegraph. Copyright, Telegraphic Messages Ordinance, 1894. Received, June 8, 9.08 a.m.)

Geneva, June 7.

Germany's return to the Disarmament Conference is believed to be practically assured, although those closely connected with the negotiations that have so dramatically improved the outlook decline to make any disclosures concerning the inducement that has effected the change in Germany's attitude.

M. Barthou and Mr. Anthony Eden had a long conversation to-day and it is obvious that a greatly improved atmosphere now prevails.

It is the view of the British delegates that the future of the Conference entirely depends upon the Franco-German conversations that are promised.

FORMULA FOR CONTINUATION OF CONFERENCE

Complete agreement between the British and French delegates regarding Germany's return to Geneva is believed to be in sight after a seven-hour meeting.

Mr. Norman Davis, representing the United States, joined in the Anglo-French conversations.

The three delegations will meet again on Friday morning to discuss the final terms.

HAPPY OUTLOOK.

The agreement will be presented to the meeting of the Bureau of the Conference which is scheduled to meet in the afternoon.

The delegates are in a happy mood as the result of to-day's discussions and say that an agreement can be reached within half an hour if the present spirit of cooperation continues. — United Press.

STATEMENT PROMISED.

London, June 7. Private conversations in which the British, French and American delegates took part were continued at Geneva to-day.

The latest proposals of the French delegate, M. Barthou, led the British and American delegates to consult their Governments.

It is anticipated that a full statement of the British viewpoint will be made by Mr. Anthony Eden at to-morrow's meeting of the Bureau.

BRITISH VIEW.

Yesterday, in supporting the resolution submitted by the President of the Conference, Mr. Arthur Henderson, to suspend the work of the conference pending negotiations with Germany and France to be conducted on behalf of the conference, Mr. Eden emphasised the British belief that the essential factor in a solution is to obtain some approximation of view on disarmament between those two countries.

Upon this, he said, almost everything depended and, until it is attained, few if any practical results are likely to emerge from a prolongation of the present discussions. — British Wireless.

"MUCH BETTER" OUTLOOK.

Geneva, June 7. Mr. Anthony Eden, M. Barthou and Mr. Norman Davis had a long discussion this evening, after which they stated that the situation was "much better."

It is understood that the meeting agreed to the text of a resolution which is being submitted for the approval of the Governments concerned.

In the meantime, the Bureau meeting, fixed for 10.30 to-morrow (Friday) morning has been postponed until 2.45 p.m., and it will be followed by a meeting of the General Commission at 4 p.m. — Reuter.

LIFE-SAVING CLASSES

GOOD PROGRESS REPORTED

The local Life-Saving classes have recommenced with a good swing, and examinations have already been held in the Lincolnshire Regiment and the 12th Heavy Battery, Royal Artillery. On Tuesday evening, over 20 gunners, under the examiner, Sub-Inspector R. J. Hunt, passed the test for the Bronze Medalion, following which three candidates were successful with Award of Merit. The 12th Heavy Battery are to be congratulated on the success of their achievements which is largely due to the splendid efforts and time put in by Lieut. G. D. H. Flowerdew, their Sports Officer.

The Lincolnshire Regiment are also to be congratulated on their extraordinary achievements, no fewer than 32 having passed for the Bronze Award and 25 for the Award of Merit within the last three weeks. The results speak volumes for Major Impey, M. C., and Sergeant Dutton for the encouragement they have given to the men. Sub-Insps. Hunt reports that the classes both in the R. A. and the Lincoln reached a very high standard of efficiency and would be

PRISONER DIES IN GAOL

NATURAL CAUSES VERDICT

A victim of pulmonary tuberculosis, Chung Fong, aged 21 years, who was sentenced to six months' hard labour in December last year for a breach of the Opium Ordinance, spent five months in Victoria Gaol hospital where he died last night.

In the Central Police Court this morning, Mr. Macfadyen conducted an inquest and was assisted by the following jury: Messrs. J. R. Brouwer (foreman), A. G. Donn and W. E. Hunt.

Chief Warder Buchanan stated that the prisoner, No. 17354, was sentenced to six months or a fine of $1,000 on December 16, and on January 16 was admitted to the prison hospital.

Dr. F. D. Pringle, medical officer-in-charge of Victoria Gaol, stated that on admission to hospital, prisoner's condition was diagnosed as pulmonary tuberculosis which was confirmed by bacteriological examination. From the time of his admission his condition became progressively worse until he died at 8.40 p.m. The post-mortem examination disclosed very extensive pulmonary tuberculosis, which was the cause of death.

The jury expressed no wish to see the body. The Coroner adjourned for a few minutes and viewed the body.

On resuming, the jury returned a verdict of death from natural causes.

SCREW-DRIVERS & PLIERS

MAN CHARGED WITH POSSESSION

Arrested in Possession Street, near Fat Hing Street, in the early hours of yesterday, Lau Kau, aged 31, was brought before Mr. Macfadyen in the Central Police Court this morning, charged with the possession of two screw-drivers, two keys and a pair of pliers, fit for an unlawful purpose.

Defendant stated the articles were given to him by a friend in an opium divan.

Detective Sergeant Goodwin stated when defendant was searched in the street, the keys and pliers were found in the right lower jacket pocket while in the other pocket was found the screw-drivers, one of which was of a special type. Defendant was arrested at 3.45 a.m. Another man who was about ten yards behind, and whom the defendant denied knowing, was also searched but nothing was found. A fine of $50, with the alternative of one month's hard labour, was imposed.

NERVY NANNING

TRENCHES BUILT ROUND THE CITY

Nanning, June 4. Nanning is at the moment the centre of war rumours, although General Pei Chung-hai has been trying in vain to calm the people. In the course of a public speech, he declared: "We are not planning war, but we are determined to be prepared if an enemy attacks us." The "preparation" has consisted in the construction of modern trenches around the city. Already, trenches have been constructed at Luichow and Kweilin.

The people are in a state of ferment, apprehensive of a clash between the forces of General Chiang Kai-shek and those of recalcitrant Kwangsi.

As a consequence of the conditions prevailing, the value of the Kwangsi paper dollar has declined by about 12 per cent. This is not altogether surprising, because on at least two occasions within the memory of residents their money became worthless overnight. — Our Own Correspondent.

OVERWHELMING

YEAR AFTER YEAR

Chevrolet is proud of its record for leadership in sales—not merely for the sake of leadership, but because this record proves the public's trust and confidence in Chevrolet products. A motor car is an important possession, and its owner is quick to tell his friends about its merits or faults.

Without a sound reputation for manufacturing integrity, with a firm public faith in Chevrolet design, dependability and value, such leadership in sales could never have been established.

The public bought more Chevrolets than any other car, year after year, and in that convincing way the public testifies that YOU can always buy a CHEVROLET with full confidence in its greater value.

REVIEW OF THE LAST RACE MEETING

FAVOURITES GIVE PUNTERS ANOTHER BAD DAY

"STAR" NOMINEES DISAPPOINT WITH MEDIOCRE DISPLAYS

SURPRISING PERFORMANCES

(By "Captain Foster")

Once again the favourites disappointed us last Saturday at Happy Valley, and I think the very heavy showers we had during the afternoon have much to account for, in the indifferent display of the better fancied ponies in their respective engagements, notably Soldier of Germany, King's Bounty, Hetman, Night Star and "Friday."

Sadko has always been regarded as a "quid-larker" and his poor performance somewhat surprised me. Perhaps his hard season may also be partly responsible for the absence of the customary strong finish which has usually landed him a winner in the past.

Before dealing with the racing itself, I would like to refer to the bold policy of the Stewards of the Hongkong Jockey Club which has resulted in placing the "Cash Sweeps" once more on a satisfactory basis.

For various reasons which, however, require no elaboration from me, the prizes of the Cash Sweeps have sadly shewn a considerable falling off—Meeting after Meeting—since the beginning of the current year. The minimum $5 ticket had apparently lost its attraction and we now know that the Stewards must have spent much time in thought to devise ways and means to again popularize the Sweeps.

To break away from tradition is never easy, but the policy decided upon of reducing the sweep to $1 per ticket has solved the problem, and the Sweeps have again come into their own, judging by the highly satisfactory returns paid out last Saturday.

Perhaps it was as well that the torrential rain came down in the afternoon, and not in the morning, as, in that case, the Meeting might have been abandoned.

THE RACING.

Regarding the racing, seven ponies competed for the Beaufort Handicap, in which Lemberg (Harriman) was the pronounced favourite. To a good start, What A Chance (Proulx) immediately jumped into the lead, with the others close up. There was little change until the straight was reached when Lemberg and Bay View (Liang) took command. The latter settled the issue in a few strides, and won very easily by three lengths from Lemberg. William Osler (Heard) beat What A Chance for the third place.

Atlas was well ridden by Mr. Davis to win the Bondi Handicap, in which Night Star (Butler) disappointed me. Just That (Soares) ran up to form to finish second and Saucy Face (Deitz) was half a length further away. A hundred yards from home, it looked as if Just That was a winner, but his mount well balanced for a final burst and landed him a winner by three quarters of a length. The consistent performer King's Justice (Heard) somewhat astonished me by winning the Cheung Chau Handicap, in which I thought Hetman (P.P. Botelho) had a very good chance of bending the field. It was during this race that the rain came down very heavily, and this instantly spelt disaster for Hetman who does not relish heavy going. Cossack's Beauty (Butler) gathered was somewhat unlucky in running, otherwise the verdict may have been different. As it was, he finished second, beating Sadko (Harriman) by three quarters of a length.

A good field of twelve non-winning "subs" faced the gate in the Crocodile Handicap, in which both Utopian (P.P. Botelho) and Young Hero (Carvalho) behaved badly, and were consequently left at the post. A very good race was witnessed and after a hard fought tussle, The Carp (Heard) emerged victorious by beating Bold Commander (Chanson) by a bare length, with St. Ives (Proulx) two lengths away.

Just before the Lantao Handicap, word was passed round that Racing Boy (Deitz) was the pony to follow, and the tip proved correct. Personally I could not see him winning, but he won and with plenty in hand, in fact he turned out to be the easiest winner of the day. Valorous (Heard) was conceding 21 lbs. to the winner and found the task beyond him. He could only fill the second position and Wayward Stag (Tang Man-wa, a very keen rider of promise) occupied the third place.

DISAPPOINTING "STAR" PONIES.

The "Star" ponies disappointed me in the Green Island Handicap as neither "Bright" nor "Blue" ran by three quarters of a length. Prima Donna (Harriman) third, into a place. Soldier of Germany (Soares) did not appear to relish the heavy going. Brechin (Proulx) at once assumed command and led the field until well into the straight. Gladiator (Heard) challenged and took the lead soon after passing the mile post, and eventually won by finishing fast but could not quite set up.

The best race of the day was seen in the Jule Stakes and the ponies more or less ran true to form.

Halfway down the straight, at least six ponies could have been named the potential winner. Excitement ran high as the winning post was being reached and the luck of the stride went to Powerful King (Heard) who eventually won by a head from Warrington (P.P. Botelho) with King's Parade (Soares) half a length further away. St. Joan (Proulx) led from start to finish and easily won the Manly Handicap by four lengths. Australian Boy (Taylor) finished second and was two lengths in front of The Goose (Butler). A fine burst of speed landed Heltter Skelter (Heard) a winner of the last race, the Lama Handicap, by a length, and in which Gay Butterfly (Soares) and Fudge (P.P. Botelho) finished second and third respectively.

Japanese Women Athletes

GIVE EXHIBITIONS IN SHANGHAI

Shanghai, June 5. The Japanese women athletes who arrived in Shanghai yesterday on their way through to compete in the Women's Olympics to be held in London next month, gave an exhibition at Hongkew Park before more than a thousand school children from the Japanese Premier School and the Japanese Girls' high school.

Under the presidency of Mr. T. Kinoshita, and coaches C. Nambu and Y. Nakazawa, the nine selected women, built on a larger physique than the usual Japanese women, paraded on the field and gave a sterling exhibition of their thorough training and careful exercises.

Outstanding among them are the javelin throwers with records of 40 metres to their credit and who yesterday threw repeatedly over the 35 metre mark. Miss K. Itoda, and Miss K. Nakamura, two 800-metre champions, ran the course at a jog trot and then at full pace came through with no visible signs of exertion and should give their opponents much keen opposition.

Mr. C. Nambu, their coach, has methods of his own to train women athletes and judging by his team's appearance and the rigidity with which they keep to instructions, they should have every opportunity of returning with laurels.

Following are the members of the full team and their previous records:—

Miss K. Itoda, 800 metres, 2 min. 23 3/5 sec.
Miss F. Inui, 60 metres, 7.8 sec.
Miss S. Watanabe, 100 metres, 12.2 sec.
Miss K. Nakamura, 800 metres, 2 min. 28 sec.
Miss K. Kuzuo, 100 metres, 12.6 sec.
Miss T. Yanamoto, Javelin throw, 40 metres, 64 c.m.
Miss Y. Nakino, 200 metres, 27 sec.
Miss M. Maho, Javelin throw, 39 metres, 34 c.m.
Miss K. Hiragihina, 200 metres, 27.5 sec.

MYSTERY OF ENGLISH CAPTAINCY

Selectors' Statement After Long Talk

London, June 7. The composition of England's Test match eleven, or its captain, will not be known publicly until a few hours before the start of the match at Nottingham.

This decision was reached today by Mr. Perrin and Sir Henry Jackson, members of the Selection Committee, after they had had a long talk.

It was then officially stated that no announcement regarding England's captaincy or the composition of the team would be made until to-morrow morning. —Reuter.

PERFECT WICKET.

A message from Reuter, states that the Australian Test team is also being selected this morning. The weather is fine and the wicket perfect, with indications that much will depend on the luck of the toss.

The conditions would seem to make it imperative for England to play as many fast bowlers as possible, and indications are that Bowers, Kenneth Farnes and Nicholls will go into the side, accompanied by either Geary or Verity.

Should Wyatt be pronounced fit, team may possibly be: R. E. S. Wyatt, Nawab of Pataudi, K. Farnes, C. F. Walters, Sutcliffe Hammond, Hendren, Ames, Bowers, Nicholls and Verity.

AUSTRALIA'S DAVIS CUP LEAD

AGAINST JAPAN

ANDREWS BEATEN STRAIGHT SETS

London, June 7. Commanding leads in second round Davis Cup ties were taken by Australia, Italy and Czechoslovakia to-day, when in their respective matches, all three nations won the first two singles.

Playing at Eastbourne, Australia and Japan started what was originally expected to be the keenest contest prior to the zone finals and challenge round, but the Japanese, lacking the inspiration of Jiro Satoh, made rather a sorry show, and conceded the opening singles somewhat tamely.

It has fallen to Yamagishi and Fujikura to operate as Japan's singles players. Neither player has had Davis Cup experience before, and against Vivian McGrath and Jack Crawford this factor made itself apparent.

Yamagishi succeeded in capturing the first set from McGrath, and went very close to winning the second; but once the young Australian had got on top, he kept Yamagishi on the run with his powerful two-handed backhand drives and volleys.

COOL, CALCULATING CRAWFORD.

Yamagishi warmed to his task the quicker of the two, and carried off the first set quite easily. McGrath, realising the danger of being two sets in arrears, pulled himself together in the second, and by dint of persistent attack, managed to secure it at the twelfth game.

Thereafter the Australian held the upper hand, and was only again seriously challenged in the fourth set, a challenge which he successfully negotiated.

Youthful Fujikura could make no real impression against a machine-like Crawford, who played cool, calculating tennis to win in three sets.

Fujikura made his big effort in the third set, which he took to the twentieth game before admitting defeat. But Crawford always had the exchanges well in hand, playing well within himself.

Australia may not have quite such an easy task in the doubles against Nishimura and Yamagishi, who are regarded as the best combination ever to have been sent out of Japan, and should the Japanese win that tie, they will have a distinct chance of carrying the decision to the last singles, as Fujikura can, on form, hold his own against McGrath.

E. D. ANDREWS OUTPLAYED.

At Prague, the New Zealanders, C. E. Malfroy and E. D. Andrews started poorly against Czechoslovakia, and now have only a very slender chance of winning the tie. Hecht and Menzel, who performed so creditably in the French Championships won the opening singles, Malfroy taking a set from Hecht, but Andrews being beaten in three straight.

Malfroy was two sets down before he got into his stride, but his success in the third set was such that flattered only to deceive, for Hecht, calling up his reserves, simply walked away with the fourth stanza, conceding only one game.

Andrews, well remembered in Hongkong for his exhibitions here, could make no impression on Menzel, who lost only seven games in the course of three sets.

The Italians, G. de Stefani (conqueror of Perry in the French championship), and A. Rado, who last year played doubles, put their country in a sound position against Switzerland.

Both won in three sets, de Stefani overcoming Ellmer, and Rado easily accounting for Fischer.

Macao's Next Meeting

SUNDAY'S PROGRAMME LAST FOR FIRST HALF OF YEAR

Next Sunday at Macao will bring an end to racing for the first half of the year, and it is expected that a large attendance will witness an enjoyable afternoon's sport.

A large number of ponies—in fact I understand a record number—have been entered and close finishes should be seen in the majority of the events.

A new departure has been made, as I notice there is a race confined to "riding boys." These lads have been hard at work at Happy Valley trying out their respective mounts, and I think they will account for an interesting and exciting race.

PRESIDENT LINCOLN'S 150-MILE RACE TO HONOLULU

R.A.F. CORPORAL FINED SEQUEL TO MOTOR MISHAP

Eric George Harbert, a corporal in the Royal Air Force, made another appearance before Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning to answer three summonses (1) failing to stop after coming into collision with a coolie at 11 a.m. on April 28, (2) failing to drive with due care and caution and (3) failing to report the accident to a police station.

Defendant pleaded guilty to the first and third charges but denied the second.

Traffic Inspector Saunders informed his Worship that the police had no evidence to offer with regard to the second charge, which was accordingly withdrawn.

Inspector Saunders said defendant knocked down a coolie in Salkung Road near the Kowloon City Police Station at 11 a.m. on April 28, and carried on. The coolie received a fractured leg and had to be taken to hospital, where he had remained since the day of the accident.

His Worship:—Why didn't you stop?

Defendant:—I didn't think I had done much damage.

A fine of $25 was imposed on the first and third charges.

COMPENSATION QUESTION.

With regard to compensation, his Worship remarked that defendant ought to do something to compensate the coolie, who had been in hospital for over a month.

Inspector Saunders said the coolie had not yet been discharged from hospital and suggested that the question of compensation should be left over until he was able to leave.

His Worship agreed that that would be the best course to adopt, and told defendant to consult Inspector Saunders as soon as the coolie was discharged.

OTHER CASES.

Capt. Dunlop, of the Royal Artillery, was fined $5 for leaving his car outside the Star Theatre at 10.30 p.m. on May 18.

Mrs. Labrum, of 87 Waterloo Road, was fined $5 for a like offence outside the Dairy Farm shop in Kowloon, near the bus stop in Nathan Road. Mrs. Labrum said she left her car there for only a minute.

BLANKETS AND SHEETSSTORE COOLIE GAOLED FOR THEFT

Sentence of three months' imprisonment was passed on a man named Liu Fung who was charged before Mr. Wynne-Jones at the Kowloon Magistracy this morning with theft of blankets and bed sheets from the Yauwatt Government Slipway.

It was stated that defendant was employed at the Slipway as a store coolie and was found on May 31 with a blanket and a bed sheet. As the result of a search made on him, pawn tickets relating to six other blankets were found, the tickets being issued by six different pawnshops. The defendant pawned the blankets for various sums ranging from $2.50 to $5.

Since February 23, nine blankets and five bed sheets had been missing from the Slipway, and only seven blankets and a sheet had been recovered. Defendant, it was stated, joined the Slipway on January 9.

HOUSE-BREAKING INCIDENTTHREE MEN SENT TO GAOL

Admitting a charge of theft of a gold watch, a white metal wrist watch, a fountain pen and a white metal cigarette case from No. 11 Seon Koon Terrace, property of Mr. Lau Chan-kuok, in Lung-shing, unemployed, was sentenced to six months' hard labour by Mr. Hamilton, at the Central Magistracy this morning.

Ko Kau, unemployed, was also charged with theft, but denied the offence and admitted another charge of unlawful possession of a metal wrist watch. He received one month's hard labour.

Chik Ho, a cook, pleaded guilty to receiving the gold watch, and was sentenced to two months' hard labour.

Sergeant Kelly said first defendant gained entrance into the house through a window which had been left open on the night of June 3.

FIRE
UNDER CONTROLPOSSIBILITY OF SABOTAGEPASSENGERS
SLEEP IN BELTS

(Special to "Telegraph")

Honolulu, June 7. After a 150-mile race to Honolulu, with fire isolated in No. 7 hold, but still burning, firemen are now on board the President Lincoln battling the flames.

A naval cutter, the Itasca, went out to meet the President Lincoln last night, and the fire was isolated and accompanied her into harbour.

It is not believed that her sailing will be long delayed.

There are 168 passengers on board and they all expressed themselves to be extremely glad to be in Honolulu after being up for the greater part of night, occasionally dancing to an orchestra that was placed on deck to keep up their morale.

Captain Yardley insists that there was never any real danger, although a fierce blaze had to be fought in the hold at the outset.

United Press.

FIRE OUT.

Later. The destroyer, Dunedin, also accompanied the Lincoln to Honolulu.

Firemen have now checked the flames and commenced removing the cotton that caused the trouble. Captain George Yardley said that the passengers were summoned on deck and informed that they were not endangered. Most of them had retired by 1 a.m. sleeping in their lifebelts.

VERTRIS RECALLED.

Captain Yardley said he recalled the Vertris disaster and decided to take no chances in the event of the spread of the flames and ordered the crew to get out the lifeboats and broadcast an S.O.S.

Her sailing time is now uncertain. United Press.

SABOTAGE POSSIBILITY.

Honolulu June 7. The possibility that the outbreak of fire on the President Lincoln was due to an attempt at sabotage was expressed by Captain Yardley, though it is thought that spontaneous combustion was the probable cause.

The Lincoln steamed into port with her boats swinging out on the davits and with several of the passengers wearing lifebelts.

The cargo in the main hold is still smouldering and immediately on the Lincoln's arrival, a naval tug and fireboats began pouring water into her.

PASSENGERS AT DINNER.

One of the passengers said: "Nobody was really alarmed. We got up from dinner quietly when informed that the ship was on fire and put on our life-jackets. We then went on the deck where we remained until about midnight when we were informed that there was no more danger."

SCOTSMAN'S STORY.

Mr. James Brown, an Edinburgh resident, interviewed by Reuter's San Francisco correspondent over the wireless telephone, described how in a blinding atmosphere of smoke, the lifeboats were swung out in readiness for abandoning the vessel if the need should arise. All the passengers put on lifebelts on instructions from the officers.

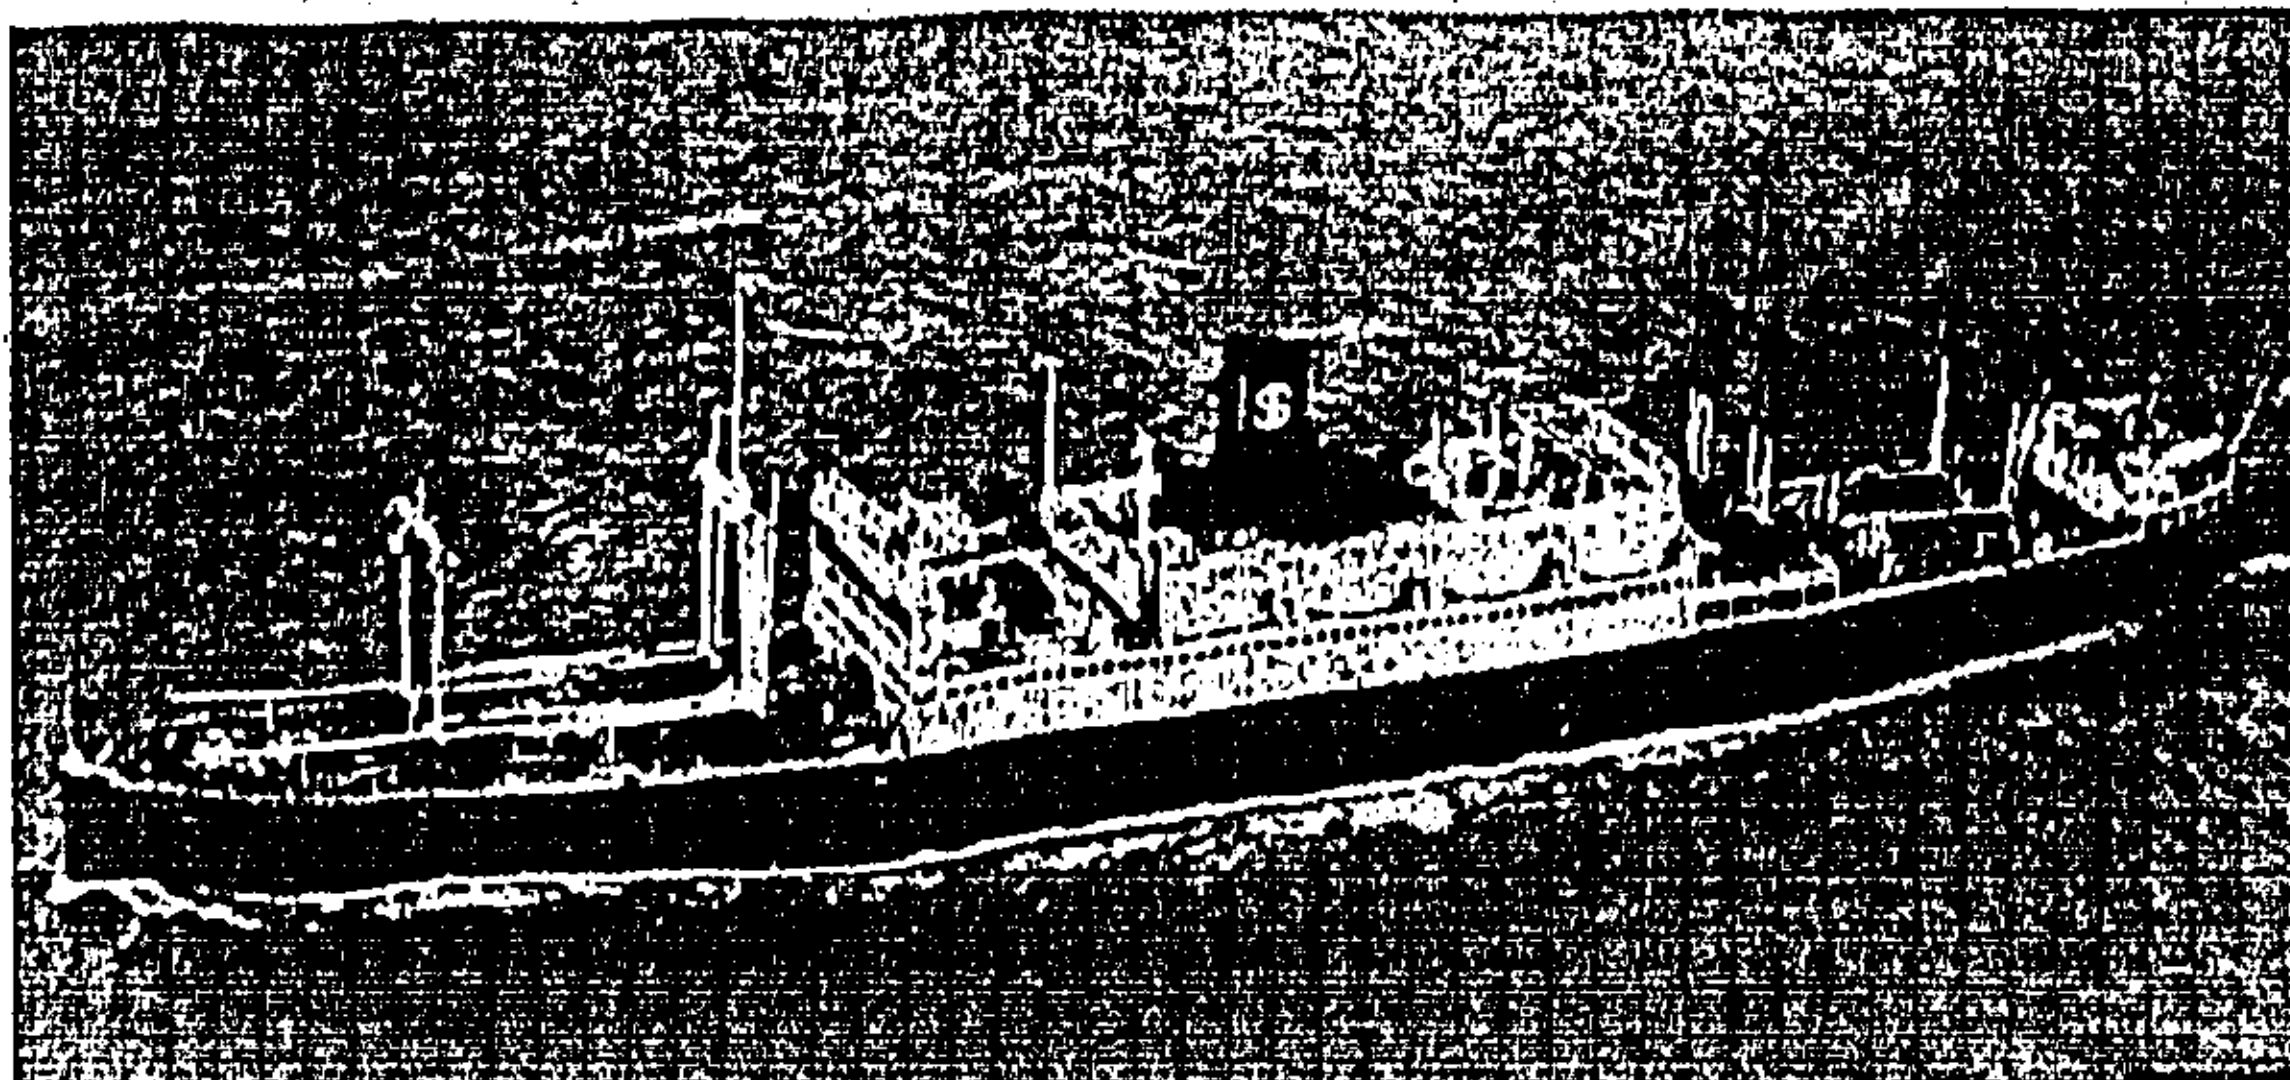

ORCHESTRA HEROES.

Miss Cyrene Hansford, who is also British, declared that the orchestra continued to play throughout the night of crisis and the passengers began dancing while the officers spent their time busily reassuring those who appeared a trifle tremulous. Reuter.

There will be a dinner dance at Republic Bay Hotel on Saturday and a tea dance on Sunday, at 4.30 p.m.

The wedding is announced to take place shortly of Mr. Ho Yuk-lun, of Butterfield & Swire, Ltd., and Miss Chan Kit-man, residing at 49, Shek Kip Mei Street, Shamshuipo.

An intensive search for him has so far proved fruitless.

The President Lincoln has arrived at Honolulu where the fire in her No. 7 hold has been extinguished. The captain has voiced suspicions of sabotage.

TO-DAY'S TRAFFIC CASES
SEVERAL EUROPEANS CHARGED

Several Europeans figured in traffic summonses before Mr. Hamilton, at the Central Magistracy this morning.

Capt. L. J. Welch, R.A.S.C., driver of private car No. 1876, was summoned for having overtaken and passed a stationary tramcar on its near side at Whitfield on May 22.

Inspector Nicol stated that there were several people getting into and out of the tramcar at the time.

Defendant pleaded not guilty to the charge, and the case was adjourned for 11.15 a.m. to-morrow.

Frank Grose was summoned for having left his car unattended in Queen's Road, opposite the Ko Shing Theatre.

Mr. Horace Lo appeared for defendant, and said the car had been left in New Street, which, he understood, was a proper parking place, but when defendant came out from the theatre, he found the car in Queen's Road. Apparently it was driven there by someone unknown. Defendant had made enquiries, and was informed that a driver had been seen to take the car into Queen's Road.

Traffic Sergeant Youe admitted that when he spoke to defendant, defendant had told him that someone had shifted the car.

Inspector Nicol added that New Street was not a proper parking place.

The hearing of the case was adjourned for to-morrow morning at 11 a.m.

E. Greyer, of Messrs. Sander, Wieler & Co., was summoned for having driven private car T267 at a speed in excess of 20 miles an hour through Aberdeen village on May 27.

Defendant admitted the summons, and a fine of $10 was imposed.

OTHER CASES.

J. P. Gardner was cautioned on two summonses for having failed to obey the directions of a police officer in uniform at Bonham Road, and allowing his car, No. 3823, to remain in a thoroughfare longer than necessary.

Inspector Nicol stated that defendant parked the car on the bend near King's College, and when asked by the constable to shift it, he would not. He had left his car there for more than five minutes.

Being his first offence, Mr. Hamilton administered a caution on both summonses.

E. Quiblan, driver of private car No. 1008, was fined $5 on a summons for having driven his car in Duddell Street without permission from the I.G.P.

The case in which Francis Lee, of 15 Robinson Road, ground floor, was summoned for dangerous driving in Stubbs Road, was again mentioned in Court, and Inspector Nicol said that defendant's licence had been dealt with by Mr. T. H. King, the Deputy Inspector General of Police.

Defendant was accordingly discharged.

PRISONER ESCAPES FROM HOSPITAL

Emergency Warning Bell

The police emergency bell sounded a warning shortly before 11 o'clock last night, and a message was circulated amongst the various Stations that a Chinese prisoner, detained at the Kowloon Hospital as a patient, had escaped from custody.

The fugitive was injured recently when he fell while trying to escape from forestry officers who sought his arrest on a charge of wanton tree-cutting. He was admitted to the hospital, where he was confined in the prisoners' ward.

An intensive search for him has so far proved fruitless.

GUARD RIVALRY

SHOOTING INCIDENT ON FATSHAN RECALLED

Jealousy over the appointment of a Sergeant of ship's guards was advanced by the Crown as the motive in a shooting incident which occurred on the steamer Fatshan on April 11, the Court sequel to which was heard before Mr. Macfadyen, at the Central Magistracy, yesterday afternoon.

Sarwan Singh, a Sikh guard on the steamer Fatshan, was charged with shooting another of the guards, Thakut Singh, with a revolver, with intent to inflict grievous bodily harm, or to maim, disfigure or disable him.

The charge was amended from attempted murder, the latter charge being brought against Sarwan Singh at a previous appearance.

The Assistant Attorney General (Mr. J. A. Fraser) in opening the case for the Crown, said that on April 6, the Sergeant of ship's guards on the steamer Fatshan fell sick, and the question arose as to who should fill the appointment. No. 781, on his recommendation, was appointed by the Chief Officer provisionally to the post, but some days later a counter-application came from Mussa Singh, a money-lender, but at one time also a ship's guard. The guards sought to exclude Mussa Singh, and, on April 11, when the boat was returning from Canton, representations to this effect were made to the Chief Officer by No. 781, who had the support of Thakut Singh. A change in duties occurred on the trip, and it is alleged that Sarwan Singh, then guarding the grille protecting the forepart of the upper deck, came forward and fired a shot at Thakut Singh, with his service revolver. The wounded man staggered to the starboard side of the vessel and there collapsed.

Meanwhile a struggle was taking place between No. 781 and Sarwan Singh for the possession of the revolver. Sarwan was finally disarmed after the ship's officers came on the scene, and was handcuffed.

A friend of Mussa Singh, the accused was said by the Crown to have sought the appointment of the money-lender against the wishes of other members of the guard. In reply to the Police charge, he said that he had taken opium mixed in wine and did not know what he was doing.

Appeared Strange.

Dr. Thomas, of the Government Civil Hospital, said he saw accused at 12.05 a.m. on April 13 in the Mental Hospital. Accused's behaviour was strange, and he was very talkative. His eyes appeared to be very bright, and he was smiling all the time and was very restless. He did not smell any alcohol on accused. He did not notice any tremors when accused held up his hands. On the whole the impression he gained was that accused was under the influence of some drug, but what it was he could not say. Opium or some of its allied groups might have produced that effect. His impression was that accused knew what he was doing. Accused's memory was sound, but he was not insane. It was possible accused might have had some Chinese wine containing opium.

Dr. D. J. Valentine, of the Government Civil Hospital, deposed to having examined the complainant. The bullet had penetrated the left lung, causing considerable haemorrhage within the plural cavity, and he did not think the lung would be normal again. At one time it was quite likely that accused might have died from his injury.

Dr. Valentine also said that he had accused under observation for

CENTRAL BANKS' GRIP
PROHIBITS TRADE

Paris, June 7. Pointed remarks about gold hoarding by central banks have been made by the leading French economist, M. Charles Rist.

M. Rist declares that it is not generally realised that all the gold mined in the world last year was bought by the central banks.

All economic authorities are agreed that a rise in prices is necessary to encourage trade; yet the monetary chiefs are concentrating on prevention of the rise by storing gold in their vaults, without creating the corresponding credits. Reuter Special.

U.S. Manipulation

London, June 7. Gold, amounting to over £1,000,000, was exchanged in the London bullion market to-day at a price of 137s. 12d., being fixed on dollar rate of 5.0634, showing a small discount.

There seems to be no doubt that the metal was taken by the American Exchange Equalisation Fund in order to check the recent sharp appreciation of the dollar.

The heavy gold purchases resulted in large offerings of dollars, with the consequent improvement of sterling in terms of francs and dollars, and also causing the Paris-New York cross rate to fall well below the gold export point. Therefore the likelihood of further gold shipments from Paris to America has temporarily disappeared.

To-day's gold offerings were due to a special order whose origin it is difficult to ascertain. One bullion dealer stated the bars were German. This is possible as gold valued at nearly £1,000,000 was imported from Germany between May 31 and June 4. Reuter.

ten days, and he came to the conclusion that accused was perfectly sound in mind.

A berth pian of the steamer Fatshan was produced by Mr. J. R. Kinghorn, of the China Navigation Company, after which Sergeant Moran produced photographs of the ship. Sergeant Scott, the Police armorer, said that the revolver produced in Court, was a 38 long imitation Smith and Weston revolver with six cylinders. Witness also gave expert evidence on the bullets produced in Court.

How Trouble Brewed.

Complainant, Thakut Singh, in evidence, said that he did not want Mussa Singh to be the No. 1, and wanted some other man in the Police Guards to assume that post. Before April 11 he was on good terms with accused, but after Mussa Singh's arrival, accused did not speak to him, the reason being that accused wanted Mussa Singh to be the No. 1.

Witness then described the events which resulted in the shooting. The ship left Canton at 4.30 p.m. on April 12, and he was on duty. He was relieved by accused at 5.30 p.m., and when he returned after ten minutes, Guard No. 781 admitted him through the grille. Accused then came through the grille, and said that the chief officer wanted both of them. They approached the door slowly. Accused had shut the door. He asked accused to open the door, and accused opened it, and shot him. The bullet struck him on the left side of the chest, and he ran to the starboard side and collapsed. He did not draw his own revolver.

Complainant admitted he had seen accused taking some opium at noon that day.

The hearing was adjourned until 2.30 p.m. on June 12.

JOHN WOOLMAN.

DR. ALLEN'S LECTURE AT THE
HOP YAT CHURCH

An interesting lecture, under the auspices of the Chinese Y.M.C.A., was given at the Hop Yat Church last night by the Rev. Dr. E. L. Allen.

Addressing those present, Dr. Allen said:

If there is in this world any spring of progress other than the insight, the conscience and the courage of individual men and women, it is not easy to see where it is to be found. What we call "corporate action" turns out on analysis to be action which a majority of the individuals composing a society is persuaded to take at the prompting of a few who are in advance of the rest.

It is easy to speak of fidelity to conscience, but to pass from words to deeds is by no means easy. The best way in which we can serve ourselves to it is by looking back upon some of those who can stand in this matter as examples for us. I want to tell the story of a man who had lived in simplicity and directness by the Light within. The Journal of John Woolman is the unadorned record of the life of a tailor in a New England country town, his searchings of heart and the work to which he found himself called.

He was born in New Jersey in 1723, and was introduced from the outset to the simplicity and piety of a Quaker household. He tells us that he gave up for a time to "wantonness" but it is not likely that that word covers anything we should be inclined to take seriously. Much more important was the impression which he tells us, was left on him from his earliest years, the impression that, as he puts it, "there had been in past ages people who walked in uprightness before God in a degree exceeding any that I knew or heard of now living." As he thought over this, he asked himself, why such things should not be possible in his own days, and in the silence of the meeting for worship, he vowed to follow where the Light might lead him. He tells us that in his 23rd year he resolved "in all things to act on an inward principle of virtue," to take conscience as his guide.

The First Test.

The first test came just about this time. He was employed as assistant in a local shop, and his master one day instructed him to draw up a bill of sale for the transfer of a negro woman, the customer himself standing by at the time. There was no reason why Woolman should have any scruples on this point, for slavery was, universally accepted. Even within the Society of Friends there were no stirrings of conscience on the subject, and the would-be purchaser was himself an elderly Friend. But something within told the young clerk that no human being should be bought and sold like this. Yet, could he refuse? After all, he was hired by the year to obey orders, and the responsibility was his master's, not his. So he drew up the bill of sale. But when it was finished, he laid his pen down on the counter and called his master and the customer to witness that never again would he have anything to do with such a transaction. It was a little thing, of course, when a clerk in a New England shop laid down his pen, but as he did so, he took up the cross of the slaves, and their emancipation dates from that moment.

A few years later, Woolman set up in business as a tailor, at the same time opening a retail shop. Business came, as now, was a matter of competition, but Woolman simply declined to compete. He would not deal in intoxicants. He would not deal in articles of clothing which could be considered luxurious; he held that, beside being extravagant, they had

WATER SHORTAGE
POSITIONNEED FOR ECONOMY
IN USE

London, June 7. The Parliamentary Secretary to the Ministry of Health, Mr. Geoffrey Shakespeare, stated in the Commons to-day that the position regarding the water shortage over a large part of the country, in the North-East, Wales, the West and the South-West as well as part of the Midlands, was generally better than a month ago. The South and South-East had not shared in the improvement.

He had no reason to think that water undertakings would not be able to meet the situation, provided consumers continued to play their part in making reasonable economies in the use of water. British Wireless.

an injurious effect on the character of those who wore them.

Would Not Give Credit.

He declined to follow the custom of the time and give credit—not for his own sake, but for his customers'. He wanted no man to fall into debt on his account. So he studied the incomes of those who came to his shop, and advised them how they might get the best value for their outlay. But in spite of all his precautions, his business continued to prosper, and he took the drastic step of ceasing to stock certain goods and sending elsewhere those who wanted to purchase them. Finally, seeing he could earn enough as a tailor, he closed his shop altogether.

How scrupulous he was and yet, with it all, how sensible and how kindly of heart, is shown by his attitude when war broke out between England and France, involving the colonies of the two Powers. War-taxes were levied, and drafts of young men were ordered for military service. John Woolman refused to countenance those who merely wished to shirk their duty, but he came forward as the spokesman of the young men who had conscientious objections to the draft. But he was somewhat perplexed when he heard that two soldiers were to be billeted in his house. What was he to do about it?

A moment's silent consideration gave him the solution. Of course, he could not possibly refuse to open his house to two fellow-men, but he could decline to take the money. Later on, one of the officers met him in the street and thanked him for his generous action. Woolman was silent. Returned home, it occurred to him that his silence might be misconstrued. So he sought out the officer and explained from what motives he had acted. Nor was his attitude to war a purely negative one. For when, at another crisis, the frontier broke out into hostilities and a fort was captured by the Indians, he ventured unarmoured into the interior and among the hostile tribes on an errand of peace-making.

Superfluities.

One special protest he felt himself called to make was against what he spoke of as "superfluities," any kind of needless and excessive expenditure. As he saw it, the luxuries of the few are made possible only by the poverty and want of the many. He was especially distressed when, on his journeys, he was entertained in a style which he knew was only rendered possible by slave-labour. He was only a plain working-man, and he had no theories as to how this wrong system might be righted. But he knew that, as far as he was concerned, he must share the poverty of the many rather than the luxury of the few. This it was which made him insist on travelling steerage when he crossed to England, and what he saw then of the hardship of the seaman's lot laid yet another cause upon his heart.

STREET DUEL

SHANGHAI BANDIT SHOT DOWN

Shanghai, June 7. A bandit and a woman bystander were critically wounded at mid-day today in a sensational street gun duel between eight gunmen and police.

The eight men attempted to rob the home of a wealthy Chinese woman in the French concession, but she screamed for help when they appeared. They had the servants covered with revolvers at the time.

Police heard the screams of the woman in the house and patrolmen responded. When the bandits attempted to make an escape they were met by police fire. The street was crowded by this time and a rain of bullets flew amongst the people. It was miraculous that so few were hurt.

Three of the desperadoes were captured, one of them probably fatally wounded, but the other five escaped apparently unhurt. —Reuter.

LACEY'S FINE GOLF

BRITON LEADS IN U.S. OPEN

New York, June 7.

A. J. Lacey, one of the few British challengers, occupied a prominent position at the close of the first round in the American open golf championship to-day.

He was equal first with two Americans, with a score of 71, a brilliant performance on a day when the conditions were as bad as they possibly could be.

The open championship this year is being played over the Ardmore course in Pennsylvania, and the commencement was greeted by a blustering wind that caused the worst general level of play in open tournament in recent years.

Many of the usual prominent performers finished hopelessly behind owing to the vagaries of the wind.

Amateurs occupied a fairly prominent place, but the best of them, the holder of the title, was five strokes behind Lacey at the close of the day.

Lawson Little, fresh from his conquest in the British amateur open championship, was twelve strokes behind the leaders.

NEGOTIATION IN FUTURE

Washington, June 7. Yet another important modification in N.R.A. policy has been ordered, as a result of the experience of its operations in the last twelve months.

The abandonment of the policy of price-fixing, except in the case of the development of clear-cut emergencies, has been announced by General Hugh Johnson, N.R.A. Administrator.

This is the first definite pronouncement on the vexed price question.

The new policy substitutes negotiation for compulsion with the object of inducing the coded industries to introduce revisions. PRESENT, PAST AND FUTURE.

To-day's announcement covers all future codes and industries already coded will be approached immediately with a request for voluntary amendments to conform to the new policy.

The National Recovery Administrator states that he aims at avoiding destructive price-cutting, while minimising the opportunities for the artificial maintenance of high prices. —Reuter.
